

Outing a Plagiarist

by Miles Mathis

August 7, 2023

Just found out about Industry Hoax Revealed at Youtube, who is making videos of my papers without attribution. See the screenshot above from his 2021 video, which is taken directly from my O. J. Simpson paper of 2016. But he cuts off the top of the paper where my name is, as you see. He reads directly from my paper for most of the video, but never once mentions my name or indicates he is quoting. He provides no link to me. His audience assumes this is his own research, and I am not mentioned once in comments. He has done this with many of my papers, reading from them directly, verbatim. When I contacted him about this before filing a takedown, he treated me with zero respect, admitting he had made no good faith to contact me beforehand (he said "I sent one email but you didn't respond". Right.) He made no offer to re-edit my name and site back in or give me any attribution. I offered to let him take them down himself, to avoid strikes at Youtube, but he just laughed it off and said it was my problem, I should be glad he was expanding my audience. When I threatened him with a takedown and exposure, he said go ahead, it was my problem. I was being uptight. This exposure would just send more people to Youtube and make more money for him. That's when I got mad and we both descended into name calling, but I am calling his bluff. I am publishing this paper and encouraging my readers to descend on his site en masse, filling his comments sections with negative comments and links back to me. Also encouraging them to complain to Youtube and Patreon that they are being duped by this guy. His numbers may rise in the very short term, making him a few more dollars, but in the long term it will be death to his operation. His audience will bail once they realize he is just another fraud, plagiarizing me and trying to surround me with noise.