

WHEN THE WALLS COME TUMBLIN' DOWN

Remember the old John Cougar song?

Before we get started today, I need to do my little semi-annual fundraising reminder. It has been about six months since I last posted a reminder. As you know, I have no ads on my site and don't like to ask for support. We both have better things to do than be bothered with fund drives or merchandizing or pop-ups or constant begs to smash this button to like or smash that button to become a member. I assume you like the purity of this site as much as I do. But without a reminder now and then, I do notice the donations fall, so here I am to remind you I am not privately wealthy. I have zero institutional support and no big patrons. What I would like to see is more small donations. I tend to get $100 or $200 donations now and then from my best readers, which is great, but they shouldn't shoulder all the burden or pay for the rest of you. Knowing what my numbers are, I don't get nearly enough little donations in the $10 range. I have hundreds of thousands of readers, and only a trickle of small donations. I assume some of you are scared to become known to Paypal, which is fine. Email me and I will give you a POBox you can send a donation to, in whatever form you like, under a fake name, if you like. And I guess you now know why I don't use GoFundMe.

And now for some comments about current events. James Carville stated in interview yesterday that the unvaxxed are “pieces of shit” and that he wishes he could legally punch us in the face. Which leads me to my latest prediction: someone is going to run up to Carville in a balaclava and punch him in the face and run off. But whether or not that pans out, Carville, as an ex-Marine and G-man toady and Pfizer rep, must know that fighting is not illegal if both parties agree to it beforehand. If he is still such a tough guy at age 67 that he wants to brawl, he can easily do that, instead of popping his mouth off. Why doesn't he arrange a boxing match with a 60-something anti-vaxxer in his weight class? I am sure there are many who would love to oblige him. There are probably some fellow Marines who would volunteer. My guess is he isn't up to it.

The more important thing I want to talk about today is another blackwash I heard on NPR today. They had some young woman on with the usual dippy-doodle voice young people now have, especially those on NPR. It's kind of a gay-man lilt, but almost everyone now has it: as if they are all training to be Charles Nelson Reilly or something. But the problem was I found myself agreeing with her. She was talking about the number of jails we have in this country, the number of inmates, the overcrowding, and the poor conditions. Of course this ties into the whole BLM end-the-police, close-the-jails mantra, by which the Democratic Party is being made to look foolish. I am not in favor of that, as you know. But there is another turn of the screw here, as I have previously reminded you, since part of what they are saying is true: the growth of law enforcement and jails in the past 50 years has been incredible, since it has been pushed by both parties. Remember that Clinton was a big promoter of more police and more jails, and so was Obama. The US has way more incarcerated people as a percentage than any other first world countries: far above any country in Europe. We have far more offenses and far longer terms for all offenses. This is because it was found that jails were a big cash cow. So they were privatized and turned into huge generators of profit. Most police forces haven't yet been privatized, but they have been hugely expanded, taking far more taxdollars at all levels. So this had been just one more giant racket long before BLM or Covid came along. Congress needed to step in and reverse it, but as you know Congress is defunct. It no longer does anything but step and fetch it for the billionaires, banks, and corporations.

But there was a considerable movement to address the problem before Covid, so what the governors did in response is add this question to their blackwash of the Democratic Party. They had already decided to move the Dems far far left and then tank them, pushing the country right one more time. After four years of a Biden catastrophe, the Republicans—or possibly some new party—would ride in and save the day. All the “far-left” craziness we are seeing now will be washed out to sea, and liberalism will be permanently damaged. Knowing this was the plan, the governors of course have assigned any project they wished to blackwash to the Dems, which is why you are hearing about defunding the police. No one in either party really wishes to defund the police. It is just an act. They have hired all the pink-haired obese lesbians they could find to promote defunding the police, but what they really want is even higher funding. They want you demand REFUNDING the police at ever higher levels, you see.

Same with jails. They are putting these people with silly voices on NPR and CNN promoting closing the jails, so that when the Dems fall you will demand even more jails. You will forget that we already had 2.2 million people in jail, about 25% of all people in jail in the entire world. We have 4% of the world's population, but 25% of its inmates. Which indicates we have about 6 times more people in jail than we should. Something is very wrong there, so as you see the liberals have a point. It doesn't mean we should just empty the jails or stop prosecuting people or remove all police from the street. But it does mean the whole system is up for a rethink. Like everything else, our criminal justice system was planned to fail. It wasn't created to help people, protect people, rehabilitate people, or even to punish them. It was built to make money for rich people. Same for the medical system, the political system, the banking system, the education system, and the farming system. Everything is corrupt because it is run by psychotic rich people who just don't give a damn. They don't want you healthy and happy, they want you miserable and dead.

It is also worth mentioning here that blacks are about three times more likely to be in jail than whites. Although blacks make up only 13.4% of the US population, they make up 40% of the prison population. Proof enough the US is failing to create meaningful jobs for its black population. The left has pretended to be concerned with this, but clearly isn't, making almost no progress on the problem in the past half-century, even under Obama. This is because, again, there is no real will to solve the problem on either side of the aisle. Blacks are useful prison fodder, keeping the big jails profitable. So, as with saving the environment or stopping drugs or a hundred other major problems, all we get is talk. The politicians talk about solving the drug problem while the CIA runs drugs for profit and Big Pharma is allowed to run amok. Just so with jails, where BLM talks about revamping the system while Congress is lobbied with huge money from the private prisons to leave them alone, or expand them.

We saw more proof they want you dead this week from Johnson and Johnson. . . as if we needed any more proof from the Pharma companies beyond the Covid/vaccine genocide. In 2018 J&J was ordered to pay $4.7 billion to those damaged by its talcum powder. Four years later it has still not paid, and it is trying to dodge payment by moving assets and filing fake bankruptcy claims. It lost its final appeal in the Supreme Court and is now desperate.

This moving of assets should never be allowed, but we will see. The Feds don't have a good record in cases like this, almost always shielding the big corporations—since the Feds are owned by them. In a sane world, the Attorney General would demand immediate payment or seize the company and liquidate it. That is clearly what should happen, since there is no possibility J&J just accidentally allowed dangerous levels of asbestos in its talcum powder. It is easy to test for asbestos, so there is no chance J&J didn't know it was there, or in what quantities. On a search on this question, of course J&J's own propaganda comes up first, and they claim talc naturally contains asbestos, due to the veins being mixed when mined from the Earth. But even if that is true, they could be filtered. Or these companies could use only talc veins without asbestos. We might at first assume that wasn't economically feasible, so they just blew it off. But there is another possibility, which the Covid/vaccine crime against humanity leads us to: J&J and their overlords are quite happy having their products spiked with poisons, since that keeps your populations down.

If you say no, just think about it. Why is it so hard to find products that are NOT poisoned somehow? Poisoned with GMOs, aspartame, mercury, glyphosate, HFCS, preservatives, BPA, SLS, WIFI, and a thousand other dangerous and carcinogenic chemicals. Do you really think that is just an accident? No, it isn't, since most of those things weren't added until recently. In the old days, products had simple ingredient lists, and if they were found to contain something bad, like lead, it was removed promptly. But in the last 60 years, that has flipped, and now almost everything has a long list of ingredients, most of them not even necessary. Why? Because the chemical companies have chemicals to sell, and they they want to kill you. As this talcum powder tragedy proves, your death isn't just a write-off, it is a desideratum. Meaning, they want you dead. They just prefer it takes a while, so that you can't figure out the cause. J&J figured no one would ever test their powder for asbestos, and for decades they were right. Even if they have to pay this $4.7 billion, they made hundreds of times that over the years, so it doesn't matter. They are making billions from the deadly vaccine, and when that blows up in the same way, they figure they can dodge that bullet as well somehow, by bribing some Congresspeople or something. They figure they can weather anything except a full-on revolution where the military comes over to our side. But with this Covid/vaccine genocide, they should be worried, since that could actually happen.

And in other news, I noticed something on the wind. Nicolae Ceausescu was mentioned twice today in my perusal of alt news. He came up first in Matt Taibbi's article republished by Zerohedge, then Tucker Carlson mentioned him in passing on his show. In case you forgot, he is the Romanian dictator allegedly murdered in an uprising in 1989. The people revolted and the military took their side, arresting Ceausescu and immediately putting him and his wife in front of a firing squad. That was faked, but that isn't my point. My point is it is strange to see him come up in both places today. Tucker and Matt are currently mostly on the right side right now, but they are both still agents, so picking up on these little things can be useful to us. I would say they are hinting that some event like the Ceausescu event may be coming up, where some political head(s) is pretend-lopped as a nod to the revolution. To protect Gates or Fauci or Schwab, they may fake a military lynching of a Trudeau or an Arden. After all, that is why these political people are there: to draw fire. They are the last line of defense for the Phoenician Navy. It is hoped that after you have toppled your Presidents or Chancellors, you will be satisfied, forgetting about the billionaires that installed them.

The thing is, the military coup in Romania was also faked, so no one ever even thought of going after the Phoenician Navy. But if the US military really defects, anything is possible. Which is why the vaccine mandate in the military was such a bad idea. Pfizer saw the military as their biggest captured client, but now that tens of thousands of troops are getting sick, the anger is widespread and growing fast. It is just one more big reason for the troops to defect under pressure. The possibility is very real.

I said a few years ago I didn't think an actual revolution was likely. I said Americans didn't have the gumption to take over a rural post office. But things have changed. After the Covid/vaccine genocide, anything and everything is back on the table. We are in uncharted territory now. There are zero previous analogies, so there is nothing to feed into the computers. All the scenarios imagined and practiced by the Phoenicians are out the window. They have badly miscalculated, and the only question left is how badly.
