

return to updates

THE SHINING PATH WAS FAKE

by Miles Mathis

First published June 19, 2020

Now that we know Marxism was manufactured from the ground up, we can blow the cover of thousands of its later offshoots. I have previously blown the Russian Revolution, Stalin, Castro and Cuba, Che Guevara, Eugene Debs, and El Chapo, so let's do another one.

The Shining Path was an alleged Marxist group in Peru that got its start around 1980. According to the ridiculous mainstream story, it was started by university professors and rich college students, a majority of them women. It then went underground and became militarized. Though leftist, for some reason it targeted unionists and peasants for murder. Why would leftists target unions or peasants? Does that make any sense? No, that is your first clue, and one of the largest. Another is that photo above. Could it look any more staged and pasted together?

As usual, let's start at Wikipedia, just going down the pages looking for red flags. The leader of Shining Path was Abimael Guzman, and that is a Jewish name, of course.

Witness the nose. And what is El Chapo's real name? Oh yeah, Joaquin Guzman. Just a coincidence, right? No, because Guzman is a Spanishizing of Gussmann, and they are related to Levys and Perez (aka Peron/Pereira). Abimael was the son of a rich merchant, one who had also won the national lottery, making him even richer. And you don't think the lotteries are rigged? His mother was a Reynoso, also a Jewish name. It comes from Reyes, meaning "kings", but also linking us to the lion these people use to represent their royalty. Levi also means "lion" in Hebrew and Russian. [Osama also means "lion" in Arabic. So does Asad/Assad. Sher means "lion" in Persian. Luan means "lion" in Albanian. Llew means "lion" in Welsh. Hari means "lion" in Hindi. Ari means "lion" in Hebrew. So does Areli. You might want to memorize those, since they will come in handy in the future.]

The Guzmans have been prominent Phoenicians in South America for a long time. See for example Antonio Guzman Blanco (above), who was the dictator of Venezuela in the 1870s and 80s. He followed by a few years previous President Julian Castro. Guzman's righthand man and top general was Juan Crisostomo Falcon, another prominent Phoenician. That name is a just a variant of Falconer/Faulkner, linking him to William Faulkner as well as the Falconers and Faulkners in the peerage. We have also looked at them before.

Another of Guzman's generals and buddies, Joaquin Crespo, was President 1883-5, during which years Guzman lived like a king in Paris. Crespo was also Jewish, of course, and his wife was a Parejo.

Guzman returned for a third term after that. He was closely tied to the US, as you would expect, being called the Illustrious American by his compatriots. Like Henry VIII and the French Revolutionaries, he loved to steal property from the Catholic Church, making him a billionaire. He was a Freemason, and his brother-in-law was the banker Manuel Antonio Matos—another billionaire Jew. In fact, Matos is known as the richest man ever in Latin America, the Rockefeller of the South. He was three times Minister of Finance, and tried to overthrow Cipriano Castro's government in Venezuela in 1903. He failed, but succeeded a few years later when he helped install Juan Vicente Gomez—a willing frontman for the bankers and the US.

Also see Silvestre Guzman, President of the Dominican Republic in the Reagan era, at the same time as the rise of Shining Path. He is from the same family. His wife Renee Klang was from Venezuela, and her mother was Judith Avelino from Brazil. That is a Jewish name as well.

Also see Juan Jose Guzman, first President of El Salvador in the 1840s.

Also Jose de Guzman, Viscount of San Rafael de la Angostura and Lieutenant Colonel, who—with his family the Criollos—pillaged Dominica and the other islands of the Caribbean in the late 1700s.

If we go further back, the Guzmans were Dukes of Medina Sidonia in Spain. The 7th Duke was commander of the Spanish Armada in the 16th century. He was also a Zuniga, a Perez, and a Sotomayor (think Sonia Sotomayor, Supreme Court Justice), and a recent descendant of King Ferdinand II of Aragon. The Dukes of Medina Sidonia were the wealthiest people in Spain for several centuries. They come from Alonzo Perez de Guzman, a shipper and trader of the 13th century, ie Phoenician Navy. These Guzmans had many links to Toledo, indicating they were Jewish. In fact, the last Duchess of Medina Sidonia and Princess of Montalban was Luisa Alvarez de Toledo y Maura, who continued to pretend to be a Socialist until her death in 2008, having been a member of the Spanish Socialist Workers Party. They called her the Red Princess, a great joke, as you now see. Besides being a closet Jew and a closet fascist, she was also a closet lesbian for years, finally marrying a woman just before she died. And who was that woman? Lilian Dahlmann, a Jewish woman 20 years her junior.

If you still don't think these Spanish Dukes of Medina Sidonia were Jewish, you might want to remind yourself that Sidonia comes from Sidon, which was the oldest Phoenician city, even predating Tyre. After that, the name migrated to the German states, where it was used by various princesses (Sidonie) of Bohemia and Bavaria. Medina is another Phoenician word, used for places on their routes in Saudi Arabia, Algeria, Morocco, and Malta.

At about the same time, we find Gaspar de Guzman, Duke of Sanlucar and Count of Olivares. He was Prime Minister of Spain 1621-43.

Blow that up or see the enlargement at Wikipedia to see the outsize nose. It is a great portrait by Velazquez of a very ugly man. [If you do study the enlargement, note the amazing key and spurs.] Anyway, Guzman is remembered for over-extending Spain in the wars of the time, essentially ruining her dominance in the region. But we can give him some credit, since among other things he wished to crush the rising fake Protestant movement. Perhaps he really understood what was going on, or maybe it was just Northern Phoenicians versus Southern. Whatever the case may be, he lost. He probably did so due to his contemporary Cardinal Richelieu of France, who should have acted a fellow Catholic, but didn't. For some reason France entered the wars against Spain, when anyone would have predicted the opposite. This splitting of the Habsburgs and Bourbons turned out to be a fatal mistake of the Southern Phoenicians, including the Medicis, allowing the Northern line (Stanley/Stuart/Jagiellon/Vasa/Cohen/Komnene) to come out on top over the next several centuries. The world is now run by the Northern line, while the Southern has faded.

These Guzmans came to the New World in the early 1500s, with the conquistador Nuno Beltran de Guzman. He was the Governor of Nueva Galicia (Mexico). As conquistador, his main job was murdering natives and stealing everything they owned. Sort of like now, but with a little less finesse.

In the next century, a Guzman became Queen of Portugal, when Luisa Guzman married King John IV, the first Braganza ruler.

Her sons became Kings of Portugal, and her daughter married Charles II of England, as we just saw in my previous paper on the Ridolfi Plot. Her reign was when the Portuguese Empire reached its zenith, controlling large parts of South America. That is why we are seeing the Guzmans in prominent positions there to this day.

The Guzmans have been big in Peru since the beginning: see Luis de Guzman, 9th Count of Alba de Liste. He was Viceroy of New Spain and Peru in the 1650s, pillaging the area for the Crown.

The portrait tells us everything. Can you believe that guy wanted to look at himself on canvas?

So, when you see a rich guy in Peru named Abimael Guzman pretending to be a Marxist, maybe now you will think twice before believing it. We are told Guzman was “recruited” (note the wording) by Dr. Efrain Morote Best, Rector of San Cristobal University. This University has a strange history, and looks like the CIA-front colleges we have studied in the US, like Hampshire, Evergreen State, Marlboro, Bennington, Prescott, UC Santa Cruz, Naropa, etc. For 200 years San Cristobal was a college for training Catholic priests, but it closed in 1887. We aren't told what it was used for until 1959, when the government of Peru suddenly reopened it. Almost immediately it embraced Marxism and gave off the peculiar stench of Intelligence. Best was Rector from 1962, almost the beginning. He was also from wealth and privilege. He came in as Vice-Rector at the opening, when he was only 37. That's strange, since you normally have to work yourself up to Vice-Rector; but Best's career has a big hole in it. He just appeared out of nowhere and later disappeared into a mist. He brought in Guzman in 1962, and although Guzman was later arrested and jailed, Best was never inconvenienced. This despite the fact that it was well-known that Guzman was Best's protege. That's curious, wouldn't you say?

It is even more curious given that Best's son Osman Morote became one of Shining Path's leaders. You may want to check out his Wiki page, which makes no sense. At first he was sentenced to 20 years in 1988. On appeal that was reduced to 15 in 1992. Later that year he was tried again and given a life sentence. Another trial was ordered in 2003, but that was 17 years ago and we are given no updates. We have to go to Wiki.es to get more. In 2003 he was sentenced to 25 years, not including the 15 already served. He was due to be released in 2013, but wasn't, for reasons not given. He was finally ordered released in 2018, but in the same year was tried again (on September 11) and sentenced to life. Since none of that makes any legal sense, we may assume he was never in jail at all.

The Morotes are still prominent in Peru, with David Abraham Salazar Morote being the Governor of Apurimac until 2010. Note his Jewish names. He is the leader of the regional movement Frente Popular (Popular Front) Llapanchik, proving he is up to the same old tricks. I find it amusing they use the word “frente”, since these organizations really are fronts. That is to say, fronts for the same old fascists, hiding behind fake popular movements.

Although San Cristobal University was founded by the intellectual elite of Peru, we are told it was being opened to educate the Andean Natives, who were still living off the land. Weird, since the university left that path almost immediately. Strangely, the Natives weren't that interested in fake Marxism. The Rector in the first two years was Fernando Pintado, a Navy Captain and former employee at the United Nations, confirming all my suspicions. He had lived in the US during WWII, giving us the American link. Another link was the Peace Corps, which had a large presence at San Cristobal. Another CIA front.

By 1961 the Revolutionary Student Front had already been organized, though we aren't told how that happened. It doesn't seem credible that a small new college in the hinterlands, geared to “Indians” and a vocational curriculum, would be the birthplace of a Marxist revolutionary front. In fact, it is completely beyond belief.

Efraín Morote Best. Primer Director de Letras y Rector durante el período 1962-1968.

And guess what Morote Best looked like? Don't tell me you are surprised.

Guzman's later bio also makes no sense. Guzman was arrested with eight others at a ballet studio. We aren't told if they were wearing tutus. Although this was 1992, Guzman allegedly was found with a computer which contained a detailed register of the revolutionary armed forces and its weapons. Right. Guzman had a 3-day trial, after which he was sentenced to life imprisonment. He was incarcerated at the naval base on the island of San Lorenzo. That's convenient, since no one could say he wasn't there. According to the laws at the time, for treason and mass murder he should have gotten death. But I guess they wanted to keep him around for more hijinx. He couldn't appear on TV if he were thought to be dead. But they did televise him many times, allegedly from jail, and on October 1, 1993, he publicly declared peace with the Peruvian government. So nice of him to do that and include aces and eights, Chai. We are told that due to that peace offering of Guzman from jail, 6,000 revolutionaries surrendered peacefully. OK.

Next, we are told that in 2003 an appeal was filed with the Constitutional Court asking that the verdicts against 1,800 prisoners convicted of terrorism be voided. Aces and eights again. Unbelievably, the court ordered new trials, which of course put all the manufactured stories back in the news again. We are told more than 400 people were freed. Guzman also got a second trial, which allowed for a second round of theater. Although he had previously declared peace 11 years earlier, for some reason the "Shining Path cadre" showed up at the trial and began grandstanding. But wait, I thought the Shining Path had all surrendered? I guess not. The Marxists turned their backs on the judges and delivered a revolutionary salute to the media gallery. We aren't told if they were wearing tutus. Guzman himself went all Master Thespian, saying "Long live the Communist Party of Peru! Glory to Marxism-Leninism-Maoism! Glory to the Peruvian people! Long live the heroes of the people's war!" He might as well have leapt at the judge with a sharp pencil. In other words, he was the prosecution's best witness. Despite that, we are told two of the judges recused themselves, though we aren't told on what grounds. A third trial had to be ordered for 2005, to drag this farce out as long as possible. This time he was again sentenced to life. So, a major waste of taxpayers' money. Although we are told the charges against him took six hours to read, they found some more charges to read against him in 2014, when he went back to court again. On September 11, 2018, he was sentenced to life a third time. I don't know why they don't sentence him to life once every month, just to fill slow spots in the TV schedule.

One of the things Guzman was charged with was the Lucanamarca Massacre of 1983. Pulling it apart will entertain us for a few more minutes. Due to the local killing of one of their own people, the Shining Path modern dance troupe sashayed into Lucanamarca and “killed 69 people, 18 of whom were children. One was only six months old. Eleven were women, some of whom were pregnant. Eight of the victims were between 50 and 70 years old.” They were allegedly hacked by machetes and axes.

The numerology is there to tell you this never happened. The story is told simply to blackwash the left, any real revolutionaries, or any people who really want democracy. They want you to think that populist uprisings go bad like this, with university intellectuals and college students devolving to the point they hack up babies and pregnant women in the name of freedom. They want you to think that anyone who talks about overthrowing the rich governors will end up going crazy and attacking their own: unionists, peasants, mothers, children. They want you to think no one is above this: we are told 50% of the Shining Path was made up of women, with 40% of its leaders being women. So we are supposed to believe university women did this, hacking up babies and pregnant women in the name of democracy and fairness?

Please, please, please see through this sham! And all the shams like it.

Remember, this is exactly why Marxism was invented in the first place. Marx promoted it back in the 1840s to counter the rising republican movements of the time, some of which were real and some of which had some chance of success. But all of them were infiltrated, co-opted, and blown to smithereens by the sons of rich merchants posing as revolutionaries. Yes, Marx, Engels, Owens, and all the rest were from billionaire families, and they were inserted into the Republican ranks and popular uprisings specifically to stall them and implode them. Which they did.

Although the Phoenician Navy had been controlling the opposition this way for many centuries, faking events and infiltrating their enemies, they learned how to fine-tune their methods in the 1800s. Marxism has been their greatest invention in this regard, and they have used it non-stop since then all over the world. Although it was used as a cover for fascism in Russia and China, its main use in the rest of the world has been as a replacement for republicanism. Anywhere that there is a real popular uprising against the billionaires, the Phoenician navy inserts their agents posing as Marxists. These agents then proceed to take over the local uprising, turning it to crud. They fake a bunch of atrocities, then have their Marxist agents phone the media taking credit for them. People read this or see it on TV, and the revolution fails. That is what happened in Peru, and it has also happened again and again in every other country, including the US. Because people haven't seen through this charade, the governors have been able to keep going back to it over and over and over. They will keep doing so until you wise up.

They are doing it to you right now, as you read this. Who do you think is running the current riots, the Black Live Matter mini-revolution, and all the rest? Same people. They saw a danger of a real uprising after the big Corona fake, so they manufactured a fake uprising to forestall it. They want you to think your government really cares about blacks and is on the case. They will hide a few Confederate statues and pass a few laws they have no plans to enforce, while continuing to turn the country into a police state and sheep farm. But you will be fooled into thinking progress is being made, so you will stay in your comfy chair and keep eating your Church's fried chicken.

Because the revolutionary spirit was actually low, this looks like working, but if a popular uprising in the US really should emerge in the near future, look for a whole other level of faking from the governors. This is what happened in the late 60s, early 70s, when the government had to go all out to prevent anything real from taking place. That's when they ran one huge fake after another, including several high-profile fake assassinations, the Black Panthers, Manson, Patty Hearst, the Chicago Eight, an impeachment, and a whole raft of fake serial killers. Currently they have everyone locking themselves down due to fear of mass murderers and fake viruses, but that could change. When it does, prepare yourself for a level of faking that makes the late 60s look like a vaudeville romp. They will be asking for belief in a set of gaudy crises that dwarf any before. Don't fall for it. Ignore the scripted tragedy playing on your screen, and simply continue to demand they return all the money they have stolen from you. AND DON'T GIVE THEM ANY MORE!

Most don't understand what I am up to in these papers, I know. They tell me I can't win. What hope is there when my allies are a bunch of people wearing face masks who will believe anything? But they are missing the point, as usual. I HAVE ALREADY WON, because I have successfully separated myself from the rulers of the Earth. I have separated myself from their perverted history, their perverted ideas, their perverted art, their perverted science, and their perverted sexuality. I have been offered their corruption and refused it.

Remember, we recently saw Neil DeGrasse Tyson admitting this was all a test, and we saw me answering him that this was indeed a test, but a different one entirely than he thought, on a different level entirely. Many or most people don't understand why they are here. Why were they born on this mysterious Earth? What is the point of it all? Well, it is indeed a test. The ancient texts in all religions tell you this, and they are not wrong. You were installed for a short lifetime on a corrupt planet to test your response. Will you go along with this corruption, and if so how far? We are all being tested in the same basic way, even Natives who would seem to have no real connection to these rulers of the Earth. Natives still have to decide whether to go along with the corruption of “the white man”, and if so how far. In this sense, the Phoenicians actually have the toughest test of all, since they are installed here closest to the center. They aren't tested from afar, they are tested by their own brothers and sisters and parents. Just imagine how terrible that must be, and how difficult it must be for them to escape. The further away from that nest you were born, the more grateful you should be—though you probably earned that distance in a previous life.

You don't win here on Earth by getting rich or powerful. You don't win by controlling those around you. You don't win by winning wars or shootouts or debates. That is precisely how you LOSE. You win by separating yourself as far as possible from these corrupt governors and governments. You win by refusing to let them corrupt you. You won't win by overthrowing them, since that isn't the scheme here. This is the corrupt planet for now, and there isn't much you can do about that. You didn't create the test or the planet, you are simply installed inside it. What you can control is your own response. Your job is to get out the far side of this test as cleanly as you can, doing as little evil as you can, while doing as much good as you can. Spread joy and enlightenment and prevent harm. In this way your spirit will grow, learning the lesson embedded here.

So my papers aren't written to “win”. They aren't written to spark a revolution or to overthrow the government. The government will have to overthrow itself, if it hopes to get anything from this life. I can't live those people's lives for them regardless. Overthrowing them won't “save” them anyway, since they can only save themselves. And overthrowing them won't save you or me either, since we can still be corrupt under any government, even the best. Ultimately, you can't overthrow anything but your own worst impulses, and that is all you are expected to overthrow. It is hoped you can make good decisions day to day, so that is what you should strive for. Whatever else you do, do not cave to the pressure around you. Stay inflated. Stay sane. Stay virtuous. And do not fear death. There are far worse things, such as living with your own corruption.