The Night Stalker Victims

by Miles Mathis

First written May 21, 2014

This paper is by request. As usual, it is an opinion piece, protected as free speech by the US Constitution—which, you may be surprised to hear, is still legally in effect.

I will prove to you as quickly as possible that alleged serial killer Richard Ramirez is another fake. Given all the papers I have written in the past couple of years, you should just assume any and all serial killers are fake until proven otherwise. But I won't even give this serial killer a long treatment: I am frankly weary of all the hoaxes and want to get this over with all possible efficiency.

The first clue is that his killings took place in Los Angeles and San Francisco, which, as we know, have long been centers of disinfo and faked events. Hollywood is nearby to lend its hand in creating this fiction, so we should not be surprised to find a disproportionate number of faked events in California, and especially LA. I have already proven that both the Manson murders and the Zodiac murders were faked, and they came from the same areas. The next clue is the date: the spree started in 1984. We would expect big hoaxes in 1984, since we already know Intelligence is into numerology. Just think of the famous book by George Orwell titled 1984, and you will see what I mean. Intelligence also ran an fake murder event in New Mexico in 1984 with similar numerology markers. See my paper on Johnny Hovey for more on that.

Another clue is Ramirez's birthday, which we are told is February 29, 1960. Ah, a leap-day baby, or “leaper”! What a coincidence. How clever to give a famous murderer and raper of women a leap-day birthday. If you don't know what I mean, consider that according to folk tradition, women could propose marriage only in leap years. This tradition is supposed to go back to Saint Patrick.* In Greece, marriage during leap years is considered very unlucky, and many couples avoid leap-year weddings to this day. More specifically, some folk traditions concern leap day itself, on which a man should never refuse a woman's proposal. Ramirez is supposed to have reversed that tradition, isn't he, whereby the woman could not refuse his proposal. So clever.

Also curious is the fact that Ramirez is said to have died at age 53. Jerry Garcia of the Grateful Dead also “died” at age 53, and I have shown you many red flags on Garcia in previous papers. So did John Denver, and his death is suspicious. We are told Denver's body was so disfigured by his crash that he couldn't be identified by dental records. But he crashed a small plane into the ocean. How exactly does that disfigure a corpse beyond all recognition? We are told that they had to use his fingerprints to identify him instead. But given a corpse soaking in salt water for many hours, it is the fingerprints that would be gone, not the teeth. Besides, if the crash had really created such incredible forces, which do you think would be more vulnerable: back teeth protected by a skull, or unprotected fingertips?

Dian Fossey [Gorillas in the Mist] also allegedly died at age 53, and her death was also suspicious. So did Philip K. Dick [who wrote the book Blade Runner was based on], ditto. So did actor Vic Morrow [who allegedly died during the filming of The Twilight Zone]. So did Linda Lovelace. So did Vivien Leigh, whose death was likewise suspicious. So did Jim Henson, who supposedly died of the flu. So did Maria Callas, who was having an affair with Ari Onassis while he was married to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Her death at 53 is also suspicious. So did Vladimir Lenin, which gives us something to look at in a future paper. If they could do it with Lincoln, why not Lenin? So did Tchaikovsky, whose death is shrouded in mystery to this day. Theories include death by cholera, suicide, or being poisoned by the Tsar for his homosexuality. Given his inclusion in this paragraph, I would add to that list the possibility his death was faked.

The age 53 is always a clue to look for a hoax, and it is a clue because it is more numerology. $5+3=8$, and 8 is one of the favorite numbers of worldwide Intelligence. This may be due to the Eightfold Way, the eight seats of wealth, or the eight directions. In numerology, eight is the number of both building and un-building, so it may be these operations like the Ramirez story are considered by Intelligence to be operations of un-building. Still, you will ask why 8? Eight is probably a building/unbuilding number because it is both a Fibonacci number and a perfect cube ($2 \times 2 \times 2$). In fact, it is the only number that is both. As a Fibonacci number it represents organic building, and as a cube of 2, it represents the quantum hierarchy—which is based on the number 2. To see how both the number 8 and the number 9 come out of quantum hierarchy, you may consult this paper on my science site.

Yet another clue is given by Ramirez' date of alleged death, June 7, 2013. Strange that rapper Lil Phat allegedly was killed on the same day one year earlier. They should really spread these fake deaths out a bit better. But why June 7?

Abu Musab al-Zarqawi was also allegedly killed on June 7, in the year 2006. Remember, al-Zarqawi was used by the Bush administration as the proximate cause for invading Iraq in 2003, claiming his presence there was enough to start a war. But al-Zarqawi was actually just another Osama bin Laden: in other words, a fake. A US asset and poster boy used as an actor in a manufactured series of events.

The mathematician Alan Turing also died on June 7, year 1954. You will remember him from recent Hollywood and TV productions, including the 2014 movie The Imitation Game, and the 2012 BBC documentary Codebreaker. He was involved with code-breaking for Military Intelligence, so we may assume his date of death is also not an accident. It is another signal, for those who can read them. Turing was a codebreaker, and the clue June 7 is a code that we need to break. As you may know, Turing died under mysterious circumstances, and many believe he was murdered. Turing was also a homosexual, so this links him to Tchaikovsky above. Both deaths may have been faked for the same reason.

Jean Harlow, Judy Holliday, Dorothy Parker, and Jean Arp also died on June 7. Harlow's death has always been a mystery, since she died at age 26, allegedly of kidney failure. This is unlikely. Let's see, who else allegedly died at age 26: Sharon Tate. Who died at age 27? Jim Morrison, Kurt Cobain, Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin, and Brian Jones. Curious that Jones and Morrison also both died on July 3. We will have to look at that later. But just remember that these necromancers love the numbers 8 and 9. The Tate event was on 8/9. Nixon resigned on 8/9. Many events in the Zodiac story were on 8/8. The age 26 is $2+6=8$ and the age 27 is $2+7=9$.

Judy Holliday also died young, at age 43. I read her death day as indication that perhaps she did not die of breast cancer, as we are told.

Dorothy Rothschild

Dorothy Parker's death is also curious, in that in her will, she bequeathed her estate to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Following King's death, her estate was passed on to the NAACP.^[57] Her executor, Lillian Hellman, bitterly but unsuccessfully contested this disposition.^[58] Her ashes remained unclaimed in various places, including her attorney Paul O'Dwyer's filing cabinet, for approximately 17 years.^[59]

For a famous white poet and screenwriter, that is beyond odd. In the current context, you should see it as another large red flag, one we may return to in future papers. For now it is enough that you know Dorothy Parker's real name was Dorothy Rothschild. Given that, you can probably figure out the rest on your own.

Jean Arp was involved with Dada, which we also now know to read as a red flag. In previous papers, I have linked Modern Art to British and US Intelligence to before 1910. Since we have seen links to both Dadaism and Futurism in those papers, we may assume that either German and Italian Intelligence were also involved (as with the later Gladio operations), or that British Intelligence had bankrolled those movements directly, infiltrating foreign countries with the ease they have always demonstrated. Although Arp would appear to have been an asset, and lived to age 79, this death on June 7 may still be a signal that he did not die naturally.

But again, why June 7? Well, it helps to know something of Roman history and life for this one, since we have to go way back. June 7 is the beginning of Vestalia, or the holidays of the goddess Vesta. On this day alone the penus Vestae was opened. This was the door (or curtain) which hid the most sacred area of the temple. At this time, only barefooted women were allowed to bring offerings to this goddess of the Hearth.

Also involved in Vestalia were the famous Vestal Virgins, who tended the undying fire that guaranteed the continuation of the Roman Republic and Empire.

You may say, “OK, but what does this have to do with Intelligence faking events?” Quite a lot, since although I have argued that those in charge of scheduling these events are not strictly Satanic, they are anti-Christian. See my paper on Theosophy for proof of that. They also link themselves to these older “Pagan” powers, and have since the beginning. The Freemasons have explicitly linked themselves to many pre-Christian gods, including those of Egypt, Greece, Rome, and others. See, for example, the eye of Horus on the dollar bill in your pocket. For a more pertinent example, Francis Bacon—perhaps a founder of the Rosicrucians—linked himself to Vesta explicitly, basing his temple of philosophy on the Temple of Vesta. For more on Bacon, see [my paper on the gravitational constant G.]

Through this nod to Vesta, I assume the current storytellers are ultimately nodding to Agni, the Hindu god of fire. Vesta has long been linked to Agni, even by mainstream scholars (see the Wikipedia page on Vesta, for instance). Some will try to push that link to a fire god to Lucifer or Satan, but I don’t go that far. Freemasons were never Satanists, in my opinion: they were always Pagans. Although that was sometimes a good thing in the distant past, in the present it has devolved into something mostly just nasty. Not Satanic, just nasty. My feeling is that these number references in modern faked events aren't really Pagan mock sacrifices or anything like that, they are just a residue of something the new guys don't even take seriously. In other words, I don't believe this numerology any longer acts as an incantation to a god or gods, or to any higher power. I don't think these people believe in a higher power. Like so many other things in modern culture, the numerology is just the residue of something that used to have a deeper meaning, but which no longer does. It appears that these dates like June 7 aren't used because our leaders still believe in Vesta or Agni or anyone else. No, they use the dates only to signal one another. The current storytellers are referencing Bacon, since they still have ties to him through Freemasonry. And Bacon was referencing the Vestal Virgins with his numerology. But that doesn't mean the current storytellers care anything about the Vestal Virgins. Numerology is no longer a gematria, it is just a code. To say it another way: it is no longer a sacred geometry; it is only a geometry. If our leaders were still involved in sacred geometry of any kind, our society would maintain signs of that. Except for this stripped-down numerology, I don't see them.

But all that was just a warm-up. I wanted to put those things in front of you, because they may interest you. But the real proof is in the list of victims of the Night Stalker. As usual, I will take you into the swamp on the same path I took. The first curious thing I noticed was a victim with the name of Peter Pan. Really? Peter Pan? They didn't think that was a little too obvious? I guess we should just be gratified they didn't list one of the victims as Tinker Bell.

This led me to look more closely at the other names. I quickly saw many peculiar names, such as a woman named Dayle Okasaki; a woman named Tsai-Lian "Veronica" Yu; Vincent and Maxine Zazzara; Bill and Lillian Doi; Mabel "Ma" Bell, 83, and her sister Florence "Nettie" Lang, 81 (whom he allegedly raped); Elyas and Sakina Abowath; Maxon and Lela Kneiding; Chainarong and Somkid Khovananth; and Sophie Dickman.

We will start with the last name there. Clever, isn't it, naming a rape victim Dickman? That is just one more indication we aren't dealing with a deep and sacred gematria in these events: we are dealing with arrested adolescents. This means they probably weren't referencing J. M. Barrie's Peter Pan with that name: they were referencing the washbasin in the men's room (to repeat an old joke).

Next, let's look at Chainarong Khovananth. According to the Social Security Death Index, only one person with that last name has died in the US since the beginning of time. Guess who? Yes, Chainarong Khovananth. No other person with that last name has ever died, which I guess means Chainarong was born of immaculate conception, brought up by parents who didn't share his last name. Either that, or all the ancestors of Khovananth back to the Mayflower or Magna Carta are still alive: maybe we are supposed to believe they are vampires or immortals of some other stripe. Find-a-Grave has never heard of anyone else named Khovananth, either. Neither have the national obituaries, which list only Chainarong Khovananth.

We get the same curious results if we do a people search on the last name Kneiding. There is almost no one with that name nationwide. If you simply type "Kneiding" into Google, you get results only from Germany. In the US, there appear to be only about ten people with that last name, and they all seem to be in Michigan or California. That is curious because real last names are never that rare. This indicates this is a fake name, used by Intelligence because it is never used by real people. We have seen this again and again in my previous papers, where the CIA goes to a list of fake or unused names for its events. My guess is the few people in the US with the name Kneiding are either agents or ghosts.

The same goes for the name Abowath. Elyas is a Jewish name, a variant of Elias. And Jacob is one of the most popular boys names in the US, most popular with Jews. So it is curious that a nationwide people search on the name Jacob Abowath finds nothing. Likewise James, John, Michael, etc. Zero results. No girls names, either. Try Helen, for example. Zero results. This indicates that Abowath is another fake last name.

What about the more normal names among the victims, like Whitney Bennett, Carol Kyle, Mary Louise Cannon, Joyce Lucille Nelson, Chris and Virginia Peterson, Bill Carns, and Inez Erickson? It looks to me like the group assigned with coming up with fake names for this event split into two or more sub-groups, each using a different method for generating names. As we have just seen, the first group chose to fake their names entirely, using foreign-sounding names as a screen. But the second group raided some old lists to find their names, thinking to fool most people by going back many decades. In this way they could also have a laugh. For instance, you may think you know where they got the name Ma Bell, but you probably don't know the whole story. Notice that her full name is Mabel Bell. Well, that was the name of the wife of Alexander Graham Bell. Look up Mabel Gardiner Hubbard.

What about the name Florence Lang? Well, Florence Lang was the wife of Peter Lang, a silent film actor. Since Intelligence is closely tied to Hollywood, some of those working on these events know a lot about the early years of film, and they borrow names from the silent film era.

Someone in the second group apparently didn't know many historical references, but wanted to include a joke of his own. Inez Erickson was the wife of D. James Kennedy, a founder of the Moral Majority and a big TV pastor in the 1970's and 80's. So that's where they borrowed that name.

In 2011—26 years later—another Whitney Bennett was allegedly murdered in Delaware. Either that is a really unlucky name for a girl, or the spooks are recycling names again.

The name Mary Louise Cannon was a bit harder to decipher, but I think I cracked that one as well. It is a reference to Lou Cannon and his wife Mary. At the time of the alleged Ramirez murders, Louis Cannon was the White House correspondent for the Washington Post. The Post is a famous spook hideout. Cannon has also written five books about Ronald Reagan. So my guess is Lou Cannon may have been one of the ones assigned to come up with this fake names list in the Night Stalker hoax. Either that or someone on the committee knew him and thought it would be funny to reference him. FYI, Cannon also wrote a book about the Rodney King riots, so I read that as indication those were also faked.

Something just occurred to me after writing that last sentence, so I will share it with you. It popped into my head that Noam Chomsky dismissed all theories about 911 being some sort of hoax by saying that one could find anomalies in any event, if one desired. We can now turn that misleading dismissal on its head by noticing that almost all famous events were faked. Which means the fact that we can find anomalies in them isn't indication that all real events have anomalies. Rather, it means that we find anomalies in most events because most events are faked.

More broadly, this means that the idea we all have in our heads that life doesn't make much sense isn't a natural idea. It was planted there. All these fake events don't make sense, yes, but they were manufactured. So it isn't life that is senseless, it is the story sold to you by the storytellers that is senseless. Life beyond the MATRIX may be completely sensible, logical, and rational, with very few anomalies and no bald contradictions. Let that idea swim through you mind for a few weeks and see how you come out the other end.

*Two of Ramirez's victims were said to have been killed on St. Patrick's Day, March 17.
