

What They Don't Tell You about Dr. Acer

by Miles Mathis

October 2, 2026

A reader clued me in here, telling me this story was another fake, though he didn't give me any specifics. Just recommended I do my stuff. Which I am doing now.

If you don't know, Dr. David Johnson Acer is the gay dentist who allegedly infected a bunch of his patients in Stuart, Florida, in the late 1980s, dying in 1990. That is your first potential red flag: Stuart, FL. It looks like it could be our first CIA marker.

The second one is his birthdate: November 11, 1949. 11/11, another common marker in these fake events.

Then there's that photo above, which they have obviously tampered with to make him look like he has AIDS. This was the 1980s, so why is that black and white and why is it so bad? It looks to me like they have tried to make him look bald, since you can see where they have erased his hair. They have also erased most of his eyebrows.

Acer was an Air Force captain, which is our fourth potential red flag. Here's the next one:

Three days before his death, Acer ran an open letter in several newspapers that he had AIDS.[\[citation needed\]](#)

Sounds like a project to spread fear, doesn't it? He was cremated with no memorial service, which hides the body. He now has a memorial plaque at Sarasota Memorial Park, which Findagrave lists as his grave. It isn't. Just a plaque with nothing under it.

Instantcheckmate has a listing for him, but lists him as still alive, age 76. So the big computer there knows of no death certificate. It does not match Wikipedia, which lists locations of Cleveland and West Palm Beach for him. It lists only Stuart, Jensen Beach, and Dania, FL. I guess those last two are where he lived after death. All relatives are scrubbed.

But it gets better, because I followed his ancestors at Findagrave, where I discovered he is a direct descendant of President John Adams. See his 2g-grandfather Volney Alonzo Acer, where it says

Mr. Acer was born at Pittsford, N.Y., November 18, 1818, and came of old New England stock, being a direct descendent of John Adams, the second president of the United States.

He also comes from Clarks, Bowens, Goulds, and Cones \(Cohens\), indicating the usual thing.

Acer was supposedly born in Cleveland, according to Wiki, but his father is from Buffalo, and all his family is in the same Memorial Park in Sarasota, FL. His grandparents are from Orleans County, NY. So Cleveland looks like a feint. That memorial in Sarasota may be a feint, too, to keep you off the connection to Adams of New York.

Kimberly Bergalis is the young woman who famously was infected by Dr. Acer and allegedly died a year after him at age 23. But there are big problems with that as well.

She claimed to be Catholic and a virgin, but 60 Minutes proved that wasn't true in 1994, when it aired videotape of her admitting she had slept with at least two men. She had also been treated for genital warts. The Catholic claim is also a lie, since Bergalis is a Jewish name. Although Findagrave scrubs her mother from her page, on her father's page we find she was a Cathcart. Hang on to that since it is a big clue. Her grandmother was a Lazur and her uncle was a Sakusky. Her aunt was Gladys Hoffman. Her cousin was a Kleinhagen. Kimberly's father George was an Army sharpshooter and finance director (banker) for the city of Fort Pierce for 40 years. His half-brother William was also Navy.

Just so you know, Cathcart is a peerage name. They are Earls from Glasgow closely related to the Kennedys, Douglasses, Hamiltons, and Stewarts. They come directly from James V, King of Scotland. Later they became generals and ambassadors to Russia, which was apropos. The 1st Earl married an Elliot from New York in 1779, since she was a Steuart and therefore a cousin. Her father was Lieutenant Governor of New York. The 5th Earl married a Raubenheimer in 1919, of those Jewish bankers.

Kimberly's sister Allison married James Travis Tringis, who allegedly died at age 26 in a boating accident. He, too, has a memorial at Findagrave and a Memorial Fund in his name in Florida.

James Travis Tringas, 26-year-old attorney and in-house counsel to First National Bank & Trust, died as a result of a boating accident on Feb. 5, 2000. The grandson of a pioneering Greek Orthodox banking family the Okaloosa County native was a 1991 graduate of Choctawhatchee High School. His paternal grandparents are James John Tringas, founder of First National Bank & Trust, and Mrs. Kathryn Benaquis Wise, the first Queen of Bowlegs.

So that's weird. Tragedy sure seems to follow this family around. This grandfather was Army Air Corps and a Freemason and Shriner. We are told this family was Greek Orthodox, but real Orthodox Christians don't become Freemasons. I don't believe the Tringas are Greek Orthodox, but they are Greek, being from Volos. It is a big Phoenician Navy seaport. From Wiki:

The city had a vibrant Jewish community in the early 20th century: from ≈500 in 1896, it rose to ≈2,000 in 1930, before falling drastically to 882 members in 1940, because of emigration to the great cities of Thessaloniki and Athens or abroad. During the Axis occupation of Greece, the prompt actions of the local rabbi, Moshe Pesach, and the Greek authorities saved about 700 of the local Jewish community from deportation to the Nazi death camps.[18]

Kimberly has another sister named Sondra. So let's do a search on her. The weirdness continues, as I knew it would. FastPeopleSearch can't make up its mind as to whether she is dead or alive. The listing says she died young in 2000, at age 21. But when we go to her page it says she is now 47, living in Fort Walton Beach across the street from her brother-in-law James Travis Tringas, who the computer also thinks is still alive and 46. The computer doesn't even think he is dead in the raw listing, much less on his actual page. James' ghost is living in a 4,600sqft house while Sondra's ghost is living across the street in a smaller house. The address is given in this free public search but I will not post it.

So, can you say “sister switch”? It's an old gambit, and we have seen it with Sharon Tate, Dorothy Stratten, Amelia Earhart, and others.

And guess who else these Bergalises are related to? The Adams. I remind you that Dr. Acer is a direct descendant of John Adams. So Acer and Bergalis are cousins.

So much to see there. But why is her sister Allison not on that list? FastPeopleSearch has no results for Allison Bergalis or Allison Tringas. Even stranger is that Allison is not on the page of her husband James Tringas. We do find a Katrina Tringas, 50, and James is her first relative listed, in the husband spot. But the linked Truthfinder does list Allison Tringas, age 55 in Destin, FL. With strange locations also in Metairie, LA, and Sterling, VA. Sterling is just north of Dulles, not far from Langley. Metairie could be NSA New Orleans.

So why would CIA or Air Force or some other party fake this story? Not only as part of Operation Chaos, but as a part of the whole AIDS, Herpes scare of the 1980s, created to drive people apart sexually. And not just gays. If you lived through that time you remember straight people were testing themselves and prospective partners for AIDS and Herpes from the late 80s to the 2000s and beyond. Some still are. My ex-wife, who I met in 1985, told me soon after we met that she might have Herpes, based on one tiny dot on her privates that soon went away. I never got anything from her in ten years and don't believe she ever had it. But her doctor had her scared, probably to sell her some expensive test or treatment. It was just one more thing they were using to scare people away from having sex, and it worked marvelously, as we now know. The sexual landscape has continued to destruct since then and is now a shambles.

With the Acer project, I believe the central push was to mandate testing for all healthcare workers, like we saw recently with Covid. Some consortium of billionaires no doubt had invested in tests and mitigation for HIV and AIDS, and this was one of their projects to drive it.

Does this mean the whole AIDS crisis was a scamdemic, like Covid? Many of my readers are telling me Duesberg and Mullis were right. Well, since we now know from Covid how the medical establishment works, with thousands or millions being paid off from the top down by evil entities like Pfizer, it means we should re-analyze AIDS in the light of that new knowledge, which neither Duesberg or Mullis factored into the equation. And it doesn't help the AIDS story that Anthony Fauci was crouching behind both that and the Covid Plandemic.

In the push against Mullis and Duesberg we were told these two couldn't be right against thousands of mainstream experts, though Mullis was a Nobelist and Duesberg was a tenured professor of molecular biology at Berkeley and a member of the National Academy of Sciences. But we now know what to think of that. Not only is that a bogus argument, since science isn't a matter of votes, but Covid taught us the extent to which experts can be bought off, especially in science and medicine. We also know it from my fight with the mainstream, where thousands have been bought off or silenced by institutional pressure. See [the solar cycle fracas for the easiest example of that.] We see it on their Wiki pages, where the "argument" against them never gets beyond these ad hominem feints and bows to number and authority. We are told over and over they were wrong, but not once are we given any example. Just some quote of an editor at Nature or a Cohen (see Jon Cohen, Science, 266, 1994), where again nothing of substance is said:

...although the Berkeley virologist raises provocative questions, few researchers find his basic contention that HIV is not the cause of AIDS persuasive. Mainstream AIDS researchers argue that Duesberg's arguments are constructed by a selective reading of the scientific literature, dismissing evidence that contradicts his theses, requiring impossibly definitive proof, and dismissing outright studies marked by inconsequential weaknesses.

What researchers? Let me guess, Rockefeller or Gates researchers? But this isn't scientific language, because as scientists we don't care what some unnamed researchers think, since we have no proof they even exist. Cohen could be making them up and probably is. And these broad dismissals are no dismissals at all. This is just bloviating until you address one of Duesberg's actual arguments, which these fellows will never do since they don't want to give him press. I know, because this is the same way they respond to me. This is precisely how they have programmed AI to respond to searches on me. Ignore everything I ever said and claim mainstream scientists don't agree with me, without ever giving a name. Then claim I make mistakes without showing one of them. What mistakes, specifically? No counter-argument, just variations of "he's wrong".

I will show you what I mean by being specific. Cohen says Duesberg dismisses studies based on inconsequential weaknesses. What studies? This sentence has no content without knowing which studies. Obviously Duesberg thought the weaknesses were consequential or he wouldn't have keyed on them. He said why. Cohen says they are inconsequential but doesn't tell us what the weaknesses were, much less how they weren't consequential. So this isn't a reply or an argument, it is just flapdoodle. It is a bunch of words pretending to be a response. This is what the mainstream specializes in. 99.99% of new science and AI is gas of this precise sort.

Name-dropping standing for science. Tongue-clicking that these two fellows would dare to disagree with big-money mouthpieces.
