

The NARCO-STATE isn't SINALOA

Sam Cooper at the Bureau.news ran an article today under the title

Federal Prosecutors Charge Sinaloa's Governor, a Senator, a Mayor, and Seven Other Senior Mexican Officials With Running a Narco-State for the Chapitos

It claims:

In what appears to be the first instance in American legal history of the Justice Department indicting a sitting Mexican governor, prosecutors allege that Ruben Rocha Moya, 76, who has served as governor of Sinaloa since November 2021, did not simply accept cartel money. He allegedly made his deal with the Chapitos – the sons of Joaquin “El Chapo” Guzman – before he was ever elected, in a meeting guarded by Cartel sicarios armed with machineguns, and delivered on every term thereafter.

That's rich for many reasons, starting with the fact that the Guzmans are just actors and puppets of the CIA, El Chapo being another one of their scarecrows, as I have shown many times. Remember how Sean Penn was interviewing El Chapo?

Hilarious, right? The second reason it is a joke is that US courts have no jurisdiction over Mexican governors and can't legally charge them with anything. That would have to be done in an international court. But the biggest reason this is a joke is that you have to ask how the US has the gall to charge any country with running a narco-state, seeing that we are owned by Pfizer and the other drug companies, as the vaccine blitz after Covid proved. That's a narco-state, by definition. But even without that, every man, woman, and child is on so many drugs they can't see straight, and have been for decades. Not only alcohol, pot, caffeine, and amphetamines, but now also Valium, Adderol, Zoloft, Prozac, Ritalin, Abilify, Xanax, Oxycontin, Fentanyl, Ozempic, methadone, nicotine, cocaine, "vaccines", and a stew of PEDs. And those are just a few of the biggest sellers: there are thousands more. So watching the US charge Mexico with running a narco-state is like watching Stephen Colbert attack Jimmy Kimmel for not being funny anymore.

If you don't believe me, I send you to the Wikipedia page for Sinaloa Cartel:

Statements from a Mexican diplomat, which were revealed from leaked emails from the Stratfor leak in 2012, appeared to imply the belief amongst Mexican officials that U.S. officials were assisting the Sinaloa cartel's drug smuggling efforts into the U.S. and were protecting the cartel while attacking its rivals in an attempt to lower violence between Mexican drug cartels; this was backed up by information provided by a Mexican foreign agent, codenamed MX1.^[177] The allegation that U.S. officials were controlling the drug trade through Mexico was corroborated by the former spokesman of the State of Chihuahua, Guillermo Terrazas Villanueva.^[178]

In March 2015, BBC TV program This World broadcast an episode entitled "Secrets of Mexico's Drug War"^[179] which reported on the U.S. government's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives' Operation Fast and Furious which had allowed licensed firearms dealers to sell weapons to illegal buyers acting on behalf of Mexican drug cartel leaders, in particular the Sinaloa Cartel.^[180] In the same documentary it is shown that the U.S. Justice Department invoked national security reasons to prevent Humberto Loya Castro, the lawyer of the Sinaloa Syndicate, from being summoned as a witness to the trial against Vicente Zambada Niebla.

The War on Drugs or on foreign cartels became a farce decades ago, since the US government is the biggest drug cartel in the world, and we know it wants you addicted to as many drugs as you can put in your mouth at the same time. The preferred US citizen is one that can fit at least 50 pills in his mouth every morning, and another 20 or 30 suppositories and needles during the day, plus a 16-hour vape. Anything short of that and he isn't doing his job supporting the economy.

From the current article:

“The Sinaloa Cartel is a ruthless criminal organization that has flooded this community with dangerous drugs for decades,” said U.S. Attorney Jay Clayton. “No matter your title or position, we are committed to bringing you to justice.”

Again, you have to laugh. Pfizer has also flooded this community with dangerous drugs for decades, as have Moderna, Astrazeneca, GlaxoSmithKline, Novartis, Lilly, Merck, Bayer, J&J, and dozens of other huge companies. Why are they respected companies worth billions, with CEOs that Trump has called “great, great men”, instead of ruthless criminal organizations? You will say they have all been indicted many times, often paying millions in penalties, which is true, but those penalties are always just slaps on the wrist, usually in the low millions, often being settlements with no admission of guilt, and they come out the other end unscathed. New promotion just kicks in, including promotion from the government, and it is all swept under the rug.

Which is why they have to divert your attention to these fake foreign cartels like Sinaloa. They need you eyes off local crimes and criminals, so they manufacture these Hollywood bad guys, taking a page out of the old J. Edgar Hoover playbook. But now instead of fake Italian mobsters in loud suits from Chicago or New York, they have decided to go with these little Hispanic guys in Mexico or Colombia or somewhere, since that is far harder for you to confirm, or non-confirm. What are you going to do, fly down to Colombia and see for yourself? No, you have to take Sean Penn's word for it. You saw it on CNN, so it must be true. Your government wouldn't lie to you, right? The government that allows Big Pharma to push all these dangerous drugs on you; the government that sets up an FDA and CDC and WHO and then allows them to be staffed and run by Big Pharma. The government composed of a Congress that is supposed to provide oversight for these agencies, and then provides no oversight. The government composed of a President and Court system that is supposed to provide oversight for these agencies and companies, and then provides no oversight. Only further promotion.

But I remind you: YOU have oversight. You can solve this problem without any of those people or agencies. Stop buying and taking the drugs! Stop believing the news. Stop letting these people herd you. Dry out, sober up, and slap yourself awake. Your life is still yours as long as you have the gumption to claim it.
