

It's About to Get Even Weirder

This paper came from a dream I had last night, which—when I woke up—I realized was a premonition.

If you read the recent story about the college professor having sex with his dog in a public parking lot, you may have thought things had gotten really weird, and they have. But you ain't seen nothing yet, because that is just a taste of the future. Almost no one is what our grandparents would have called sexually normal anymore, and within a decade that number will drop to near zero. It will do so because sexual normalcy has been destroyed on purpose by the Phoenicians. They don't want you to have a healthy, happy natural sexuality because it doesn't suit their schedules and profits. They want you as sexually dysfunctional as possible, since that disempowers you and makes you a better consumer at the same time. They want you to think this is about empowerment via acceptance, but it is the exact opposite. It is about disempowerment via fragmentation and confusion.

You will better understand what I mean by that by the end of this paper.

Here is what is about to happen, and why. As you know, even before Covid loneliness was an epidemic. It got much worse in the past three years, as we were all masked and isolated on purpose. Psychological problems are at an all-time high. But round two of that is just around the corner, and it will make everything ten times worse—again, on purpose. None of this is happening by accident.

What most people don't know is that the technology to create life-like human dolls is already here. I remember the story from last year about some company making a doll for a Chinese woman grieving about her daughter that had recently died. They used photos of the girl to create a doll that looked just like her. So the technology is already here. They basically fed photos of the girl into a computer and then 3D printed her in silicone. They then painted her somehow and added a wig and so on. Many of us were creeped out by that, but the woman wasn't. She was ecstatic.

What does that tell you? Well, what a fiction writer or any creative person could predict from that is clear: we see the beginnings of not only a massive fad, but of a potentially life-changing movement that will distort human sexuality even further. Currently these dolls are very expensive, but as with anything else the price will drop and the quality will rise, until everyone will want one. Or several. Not only will you be able to order up a dead relative or ex-lover, you will be able to order up a celebrity. For a few hundred dollars you will be able to have Amazon deliver you an anatomically correct Chris Hemsworth doll or an Emily Ratajkowski doll. There will probably be an effort to legislate against making dolls of living people, but either the law won't hold or the black market will be impossible to police. The Phoenicians will "give up" and laissez-faire will rule.

Even if they passed a law against making dolls of living people, the merchants would get around that by selling dolls of dead celebrities. You will be able to order a doll of Cary Grant or Farrah Fawcett, at whatever age you best liked them. Choose your hair style. Choose your clothes. Tan or pale. With or without fingernail polish and lipstick. Do you want Farrah Fawcett with a beard? Cary Grant with double-D's? You can get that, too. Anything you want.

Very soon these dolls will be everywhere and it will be a commonplace. As with CGI, the creep factor will dissipate quickly for most people, and those who don't have dolls will be considered weird, like the Amish. People will sleep with their dolls and have sex with them. Many will marry them. It will be like the movie Her, but with dolls instead of phone aps. Everyone won't be married to Siri, they will be married to movie stars. Some Brad Pitt of the near future will have a million wives, via his silicone dolls.

The Phoenicians will love this trend, of course, since it will be great for population control. Dolls don't have babies.

Life-like robots are still in the distant future, but these dolls are not. They are right around the corner, and they can be made even more lifelike with things like warmth and talking programs. You can put a computer inside the doll, a Siri ap that can be made to sound like any moviestar you like, past or present.

You will say, "why would anyone have a doll when they can have a real human partner?" Because the Phoenicians will continue to make having a real human partner harder and harder. They will continue the programs they already have to split us, by making us hate one another. They will continue making us so obnoxious and dysfunctional, no one will want to spend time with us except talking dolls. We are already almost there. Many have already been there for years.

You will say that people want children. Yes, and you will be able to buy babies and children, too. [\[In fact you already can.\]](#) You will be able to trade in that one-year-old for a two-year-old, and so on.

You can buy that baby at Ebay right now for $100.

Remember that saying, “I wish they would stay this age”? Well, you can make them stay that age. Just don't buy the older model. When your doll that looks exactly like the cute six-year-old moviestar wears out, buy a duplicate. That way we can get rid of teenagers altogether, avoiding that annoying age. Except, of course, for those who want to have sex with them.

And I am not not joking. That picture is from a now-deleted 2021 article entitled “Chinese Company Launches Child-sized Sex Dolls for Pedophiles”. Note the title of the site where that 404 page is now parked: Kabalala.com. Not a coincidence. My guess is they claimed the dolls were substitutes, giving pedophiles a harmless target for their lusts. But that isn't what it is about. It is about affirming and normalizing pedophilia, and we know that from many other things going right now, such as worldwide efforts to legalize pedophilia and mainstream it. All part of Operation Chaos.

For an extant link to that story, go here, but put on your barfbag first. Also here, where the dolls are delivered in their own coffins. So as usual, it is even worse than I thought.

Why does the Phoenician Navy promote pedophilia now? Because, again, children can't have children. They need to move your lust forward and backward, to pre-pubescents and post-menopausal, since those couplings don't add to the human population. We see them doing it on pornsites. You may have noticed they are pushing older women on you. That's one reason why.

I have seen lots of warnings about virtual reality lately, and lifelike dolls are the less talked about second prong of that attack on reality. Taking the links above, you can see the reports are beginning to come in, but no one is seeing that this is the beginning of a big trend. As of now, the quality is still fairly low and the price very high, so it is only a niche market. But as the quality goes way up and the price way down, these dolls will be everywhere. It won't just be pedophiles or grieving mothers ordering them. At first there will be specific coffeeshops and restaurants where you can take your dolls, but soon they will be welcome everywhere.

For many this will be preferable to virtual reality, because VR is just a step up from TV. It is relatively passive. People want to be active. They want to get up from the couch and don't just want to mime actions in place. They want to live life as much as possible. Dolls will allow them to do that, while nonetheless screwing them up permanently.

In the link above to the Atlantic, notice the article is from 2013 and that they are trying very hard to sell this idea to readers. They are not making fun of the guy for being a creep, they are letting him sell the idea:

Obviously, I'm sexually attracted to synthetic humans, such as Gynoids and Dolls, but the much larger part of their appeal is that they're humans, but they don't possess any of the unpleasant qualities that organic, flesh and blood humans have. A synthetic will never lie to you, cheat on you, criticize you, or be otherwise disagreeable. It's rare enough to find organics who don't have something going on with them, and being able to make a partner of one is rarer still.

You can see how that folds into the whole MGTOW movement, which started at about that time, and it is pretty obvious this is all part of some project. You can almost see the writers in Langley putting this article together. They aren't warning you away from this, they are pulling you in.

Yep, that's the future they have planned for you. And that tech is now two decades old (he has been married to one of those girls for a decade). Those look like expensive mannequins, but they are far more life-like now. So if you thought it can't get any worse, it can. It can get much worse much faster, and probably will. The number of things you will have to say no to will rise steeply in the next decade, so prepare yourself now. Opt out of the future now, while you still can.

You can also check out this site for more confirmation this comes out of Intelligence. Notice what they call this site that is selling top-end sex dolls: Done With Women. Sex dolls have been around for many decades, but it was never tied to this kind of politics until now. And notice the price is already down from over $6000 ten years ago to under $2000 now. Once they get it under $1000 is when I think it goes vertical. Though I probably shouldn't give the CIA any tips. And for all I know it may already be mainstream. I don't keep up.

Some younger readers may say, "That doesn't sound so bad. It isn't a big step from being infatuated with famous people through the media. And it beats being alone. Especially if they install these dolls with Siri or Chat, we will have someone to talk to." Well, that is how they want you looking at it, but I have other advice for you, if you are interested. There are other ways of dealing with isolation and loneliness than buying plastic friends. This problem you have, like these dolls, isn't natural. It has been created. You have been created by the evil media, and you can recreate yourself. You have been encouraged to pattern your personality on people you see in the media, and those people are assholes. So of course you are an asshole. You have learned from your elders, and your elders are creeps. You didn't have a chance. But you don't have to quit and give up and join their creepy world. The younger you are, the less engrained those patterns are, and you can change. We all can.

You may not know this, but when I was a kid people used to go to charm schools. Mostly rich girls, but also some boys. They were taught how to look nice, act nice, walk nice, dress nice, and speak nice. Well, they closed all charm schools in about 1980, I guess, because they had new ideas for you. They would turn the entire media into an anti-charm school, teaching young people to be as obnoxious as possible. How to look bad, act bad, dress poorly, and speak like uneducated and undisciplined monsters. How to be totally selfish, loud, thoughtless, greedy. . . in a word, charmless. When was the last time you met a charming person, of either sex? If you are young, possibly never. You may have never even seen one on TV or in the movies, since you have been brought up on rappers, cage fighters, pop divas, and bratty megastars. But it doesn't have to be like that.

You have been brought up to think you are a rebel, but you aren't a rebel. You are just like everyone else, patterning themselves on media people. As just one example: when everyone is getting tattoos, tattoos are no longer rebellious, are they? They are a sign of conformity. You might as well join a fraternity and wear a pledge pin. A real rebel would actually rebel against all the evil shit he is being sold. He would return to sender all the awful mainstream advice he gets from TV and Hollywood and the music industry.

So that is my advice to you, as a real rebel. Refuse this horrible future they have prepared for you, where you have to buy plastic friends to talk to and sleep with. Instead of rushing into that future, look back into the past. Things were very different just a few decades ago, and I know because I was there. Turn off the music and the TV and Hollywood, and quit letting them turn you into a monster. Instead, send yourself to a charm school of your own making. Pattern yourself on some nice person from the 50s or 60s or 70s. Or go back even further. Pattern yourself on someone from the 1920s, or the 1880s. Lots of examples still exist, since we happen to have old books and films and TV shows, where people acted a lot differently than now.

If you want people to like you, you have to be likable, which takes some work. No one is required to like you, and if you think they are, they will be sure not to. Make an effort, not to be cool or edgy or tough, but to be nice. Be thoughtful instead of thoughtless. Be generous instead of needy or demanding.

You will say you can't do it on your own, which is true. But, as with homeschooling, it could become a reverse trend. Homeschools could devote a period to charm school, reversing the New World Order and going back to the Old One where people tried to be charming instead of icky and obnoxious. Once people become somewhat charming again, maybe the sexes won't find each other so repelling. If you add that charm period to a period devoted to untraumatizing women—starting by teaching them that all serial killers are fake, and so on—we will have gone a long way to turning the world back around.
