

This Week's Fakes

First I wish to thank everyone who donated in the recent fund drive. Each one is more successful than the last, proving that Google, Bing, and Yahoo have not been successful in censoring me. People are finding me in ever growing numbers despite the three largest search engines mostly delisting me illegally. Just so you know, I just filed reports with the FTC and Regulations.gov to that effect. The new Trump administration requested information from the public and I provided it, so I guess there is a minuscule chance something will get done, if not in my specific case, then in general. If any attorney wishes to work on my case pro bono, I encourage that since it should be a slamdunk. All anyone has to do is run simultaneous searches on Google and Yandex on almost any topic I hit, where it will be seen I often hit the top spot at Yandex while being found nowhere at Google. Seems to me there is a lot of easy money there to be made in a lawsuit for suppression of trade and civil rights violations, and probably ten other major crimes up to and including racketeering.

I would also like to share this email I got during the fund drive, since it is one of the best ever, and very short:

I have to gush about how much I love you. Before I found you, I felt like I was wading through a thick fog. But now that I have you, I feel like my entire being has been validated. My vision is sharp, my heart alive, and I feel freer than I ever have in my life. You speak straight to my soul, and I drink up your words as if they were the sweetest thing I have ever tasted. If there were not so many years and miles between us, I would find you and plant a large kiss upon you. But circumstances being what they are, my written words will have to suffice.

If you are ever down- if the wolves are at your door, know that your admirers are many and we hold you as a treasure within our hearts. May God bless you a thousand times over. With a heart full of gratitude and love, etc etc, XXX.

That is a first email from this person, and no she didn't include a selfie. This was in appreciation of my papers, not a come-on. I get a lot of emails like that, from both men and women, though they are rarely this sweet. I do cherish them. They far outweigh the negative ones, and make it worth wading through email everyday.

OK, now on to business. That picture above is from Maui, and it accompanied an article at Infowars by “journalist” Ezra Levant. You have your first two clues already. That is supposed to be the FEMA camp where those displaced by the fire are living. It is supposed to be slightly up the mountain from Lahaina. Do you see a problem? Take your time. No, it isn't CGI, since there is film of Levant driving around there. Those pretend structures really exist. In the film it is easier to see the problem: no one is there. No cars and no people. Just these little sheds. I guess we are supposed to think this is the middle of the afternoon and everyone is at work or school. Or, more likely, they just figure you won't think at all, so they can drive this story right by you without comment. Not me. I noticed.

Levant says that this is “where all the people from Lahaina have been placed”. Yeah? So where are they? No cars allowed and they are all inside hiding under the beds? Alex is talking to him remotely but doesn't bother to ask that question. Where are they?

Nowhere, because this is obviously just a continuation of the con. They want you to think the citizens of Lahaina are living in that FEMA camp, because that keeps them from having to admit the truth: those people aren't there and are never coming back because they were bought out or bought off and had to sign non-disclosure agreements. The entire island has been taken by the trillionaires as their own private demesne. Same thing that is happening in Pacific Palisades and Malibu, which is why this Maui video was released now. Do you think those rich people in Malibu are really going to live in little huts like that? Get a clue! They wouldn't store their golfclubs and polo mallets in sheds like that.

In another story at Infowars, we find Trump suggesting chemtrails are causing autism, and that he is going to look into it. You see what is going on there, right? He is covering for Big Pharma. They want you to think it is chemtrails instead of vaccines. Today Trump called head of Pfizer Albert Bourla a “great great man” to boos from the audience. Bourla, a guy of such incredible criminality he makes Josef Mengele look like some kid pulling the legs off a spider.

I heard a similar thing going on today at NPR, which is now just a front for Pfizer. They had some fake scientist on claiming that the blood clots all over the body were real, but were caused somehow by Covid. NOT FROM THE VACCINES! There is of course no evidence of that, and can't be, since these flus have been around for centuries and have never before caused clotting like this. But mRNA vaccines have been known to cause clotting from the beginning. Pfizer and the other big companies knew that and actually added anti-clotting drugs to the vaccines to address it. This is admitted. So this segment is just a grand lie. Hard to believe anyone would believe it at this point, but it hasn't kept them from trying it. The very next segment is about a new pancreatic cancer vaccine. Yep, that's the next round of mRNA vaccines: they are claiming to cure cancer with vaccines calling up T-cells. The next billion-dollar conjob, but hopefully no one will go along with it.

The next thing I want to hit is all the mainstream and alternative sites pushing the dead Jewish babies thing again in Gaza. Even the Babylon Bee pushed the story of the Hamas parade celebrating the dead babies.

A really despicable lie, since this “parade” was staged by Israel. Do you think they are wearing those masks due to Covid? No, they are wearing them to hide their big Phoenician noses.* I know because there never were any Jewish babies, either kidnapped or killed. The whole thing has been vaudeville from the beginning, starting with the fake attack from kites on the Peace Party on October 7, 2023. But no matter how many times they get caught lying, even by prominent Jews in Israel, they just keep repeating the lies. They ignore any and all analysis and just go on as before, and since they own the press they figure they can continue to control the narrative. Used to work for them, but it doesn't so much anymore now that I came along. Trust in the news has crashed down to near zero, and that includes belief in stories like this. People have had it with these fake dead baby stories, so pictures like this:

no longer have the intended effect. They just piss us off, because we realize what compulsive and pathological liars all these people are. Imagine the levels of corruption, personal and otherwise, it takes to create these stories of dead babies and sell them to a compassionate public as real. It is among the sickest things that has ever happened in the history of media.

I will end with the good news. The good news is Trump is calling for paper ballots in all elections. Paper and only paper, not just paper back-ups to the machines. We will see if it happens. Seems unlikely. Most of the good things Trump is doing are being shot down in the courts, while the bad things are let stand, like policy on Israel, support of Pfizer, and so on. But time will tell. I leave open the possibility the Phoenicians have learned from some of their mistakes in some arenas and are dialing it back somewhat.

I was also very surprised to see RFK confirmed by the Senate. I never would have predicted that in a million years, since we know the Republican senators are also owned by Pfizer. I had thought Kennedy would be shot down and Trump would have to appoint him to some non-cabinet position. It goes without saying I am highly skeptical of everything going on now, since it beggars belief that any of this government downsizing will actually stick, especially in the military, CIA, banking, or IRS. The very rich have never been seriously attacked in the history of this country, or maybe any country, and they certainly would not attack themselves, so it is almost certainly some sort of feint. To me, Kennedy's confirmation just confirms the feint, since the Republican senators were apparently ordered to play along. It looks like the Phoenicians may have decided to fake a short-term loss to throw us a bone and defuse the revolution, but best guess is they are just using the feint to buy time to come up with something even more tyrannical.

You will say that isn't really ending with the good news, but I am not finished. The good news is that in doing this they are admitting they are on their back foot right now. A team that is really winning or invincible doesn't have to fake an L for any reason. Having any of this even mentioned is bad for them, even if it doesn't go anywhere in the short term. Having Trump mention paper ballots, downsizing, government firings, confirmed corruption, and all the rest is very bad for them even if it doesn't stick. It's on the table now, in the light, and it was put there by Trump, not by someone like me. To say it another way, the conspiracy theories have all gone mainstream now, and belief in them is viral, which is terrible for corrupt governance regardless. When was the last time the governors were so obviously on a back foot before? Never in the lifetime of anyone living. You will say they have faked L's before, like with the fake revolutions I have shown you. Yes, but even those weren't like this, since the masses hadn't a clue what was going on, either before or after. There was no media back then, so the fakes were run to fool a very limited set of people: a few in the opposition. But billions of people worldwide have now woken up to one extent or another, and by that I don't mean woke. I mean they are aware how things work. The Phoenicians have never had to deal with that. As we are seeing, they don't have any good plans to address it, and faking this L will fail like the rest, just adding fuel to the fire.

It all happened at a very bad time for them, because they have been both overconfident and undercompetent. Their postwar successes, up to 1990 say, made them think they had achieved a permanent win, but in the same period they had caught way too much of their own flak and exhaust, dimming their brains. I often say they forgot to install the fluoride filters in Langley, and that is not just a joke. All their programs of destruction against us blew back on them, lowering their IQs just when they needed them most. Now that things start to turn against them, they find all of the old "brilliance" has evaporated. The things that worked against ignorant peasants don't work anymore, and that is because they let the gap get too small. To say it another way, they starting dumbing us back down too late, and much of it didn't stick, due to a little thing called evolution. What did stick was their own dumbing down, so although they have been able to suppress us a bit since the 1960s, they haven't been able to maintain any gap. They have been dumbed down just as much, or more. And, as it turns out, we don't need a lot of intelligence to see through them anymore, again due to increases in media, but they need ever more intelligence to hide. Even a dog can spot a trick if you do it enough times slowly, and bungle it most times.

More on this in my next paper.

*I now think this is where the story of Pinocchio's nose growing when he told lies.
