

She Walks Among Us

The disinfo is now reaching endtimes proportions, so I thought I would hop back on and talk you down from the tree again. I will point out just a few examples of the fake and false information you are now being hit with. To start with, Youtube is now littered with shorts like this one, which purports to be an AI robot at a Robot Conference. It's not, it's all fake CGI. They even have one of Musk with a female robot about to give him head, which should be the clue you need it isn't real, but some aren't getting that. The question you should have is, why is Youtube allowing this disinformation, since it is an obvious breach of their terms of service? The answer: because this is coming out of CIA/DHS/Pentagon, and Youtube is just a front for their propaganda. A majority of people will believe this is real, which is great because it helps them sell AI, data centers, and the billions of your taxes they are stealing to push this incredible fraud forward. They are leading with these babe robots because a lot of guys will be easy to fool with this, because they WANT it to be real. They have given up on real women, but are hoping to replace them with these Stepford Wives. So it plays into that market as well, since although they are nowhere near creating robots like this, they do have some creepy sex dolls they are hoping to sell you for thousands of dollars. They don't look like this, move like this, or take orders, but they do look a bit more lifelike than the sexdolls of yore. Which just means they are far creepier. Obviously they also play into the split-the-sexes, destroy the sexual impulse, destroy the family, and population control projects, doing quadruple duty there. So this is just the worst thing ever. You should flee it with every fiber of your being.

In the same vein, Youtube is also littered with CGI foreign female athletes sold as real. So be on alert for those. These CGI models are also taking over almost everything, even the lead photos in stories at places like Zerohedge or Gateway Pundit. A sort of universal clickbait for guys. You should refuse to click on any of them and they may eventually get the message.

On the flipside, they are taking our entire history, all old photos and videos, and putting them through AI filters, to make everything real look plastic and fake as well, to get you used to that look and prevent you from seeing the difference between real and fake. For instance, they have taken old video and photos of Robert Redford, put him through a CGI filter, and made him look like a plastic android. See the photo below, which has been put through that process. They are doing it with everyone now, living and dead. Are they purging the real images, or just storing them and hiding them? Unknown at this point, but I guess we will find out.

Another thing they are doing at Youtube is pushing a lot of fake reveals, as you see in the subtext there about Redford's darkest secret. In that video, we are supposed to be told what terrible secret Meryl Streep knew about Redford, but the 24-minute video, narrated by AI, is a complete fraud. Streep reveals nothing, and the only things mentioned aren't secrets: Redford jumped from a rooftop as a dare when he was a boy and his first son died of SIDS. Not shocking or new: nothing you couldn't have read about at Wiki two decades ago. This is just one of thousands of new videos of this sort, where celebs are supposedly dishing on one another, but when you click they never do. It is just a waste of time. Why? Why take the time to make and promote all this crap? Answer: Misdirection. Anything to keep your mind off the real world. Huge steaming piles of fake news, fake reporting, fake stories, fake images, and fake video, to keep your eyes off what is really going on around you, starting with the vaccine genocide you just lived through, as well as the many other major thefts and conjobs they have perpetrated in the recent past. The trillions they have stolen for the military, delivering nothing. The trillions they have stolen for Capitol security, border security, fake foreign wars, fake nuclear programs, fake gravity wave detectors, fake Mars landers, fake Moon landings, fake serial killers, fake school shootings, fake rapes, fake diseases, fake medical programs, and fake science of every stripe.

Another thing to beware of is all the contradictory and ridiculous medical advice you get from Youtube and elsewhere, including again the advertising sections at Infowars, Zerohedge, Gateway Pundit, Breitbart, and everywhere else. It is the same schist mirrored to you everywhere you go, no matter your persuasion. You see the same propaganda packages in slightly different garb in all media. The dangers of taking naps in the afternoon. The dangers of eating blueberries in the morning. The dangers of farting into the wind. Why? Again, Operation Chaos. Your mind has to be constantly bombarded with this low-level noise to keep the fear levels high and to keep your eyes off reality. They want you to think that everything you do is killing you, including napping and eating fruit. The more static they create the harder it is for you to discern any truth and keep it in sight for more than a few minutes. Any truth has to be immediately surrounded by a million half-truths, and then the half-truths have to be mimicked and doubled by a million look-alike lies. All so that you can no longer tell up from down. All so that you can no longer trust your own judgment.

As another example, just when you think you are being told some truth, you find the guy telling you the truth is a Flat Earther. Not an accident. It is a standard blackwash. It is their favorite way of blackwashing me, in fact. They create a website, lead with some of my talking points, then segue you into Flat Earth on page five. They know that many people will see that and run back to the safety of the mainstream as fast as their little feet will carry them. That is the whole point.

I also see at Youtube that Joe Rogan is now selling the Shroud of Turin as real. I usually come down on the side of Christians, as you know, but this thing is a horrible fake, denounced as such from the beginning by the Bishop of Troyes.

Nicole Oresme, the Bishop of Lisieux, denounced the shroud as a forgery, believing it to be the work of clergymen for the purpose of making money for their churches.[33][34] In 1390 the Bishop of Troyes, Pierre d'Arcis, who had jurisdiction over the church in Lirey, wrote a lengthy memorandum to Antipope Clement VII (recognized as Pope by the Church in France during the Western Schism), declaring that the Shroud was a forgery and that a previous Bishop of Troyes, Henri de Poitiers, had identified the artist who had made it.[31][35] Clement issued a bull allowing the canons of Lirey to continue exhibiting the Shroud as long as they made it clear that it was an artistic representation of the passion of Jesus and not a true relic. [4]:104–107

The second most important clue, in my opinion, is that it was bought and promoted by the House of Savoy back to the 1400s, and they were always horrible fraudsters, being top Phoenicians from way way back. I have outed them many times, perhaps most memorably in my paper on Mussolini, since they were involved in that incredible fraud.

But the first most important clue is artistic, which is why I saw it immediately: the figure doesn't have human proportions, in either face or body. This thing always looked like an alien to me for that reason, and it has just gotten worse now that they have photographed it using all the modern tricks, showing this in more detail. Only those who had never painted or sculpted the human figure would believe this shroud was real.

The face is way too long and narrow to be human, though it is a common error of bad artists to stretch it like that. As a portrait teacher, I would say THE most common error. Even worse, the fingers are WAAAY too long.

Look at those fingers! They look like ET fingers. Jesus, phone home!

So I am actually on the side of Christians again, since I don't want them to be duped by this. I especially don't want them to be fooled by Joe Rogan, who is now pretending to be a Christian. He isn't a Christian and never was, the Rogans being Jewish. So this is just the usual Operation Chaos again.

It has been proved the image was painted on the cloth with red ochre, the fake bloodstains being vermillion. Three labs radiocarbon dated the cloth to the Middle Ages, 1300 years too late to be a shroud of Jesus. Apologists claim the cloth dated was repair cloth, but of course the labs were careful NOT to take samples of repairs. I don't know why some Christians so want this to be real, since the reality of the shroud says nothing about the reality of Jesus. Christians should not require a shroud to prove the reality of Jesus, should they? Wouldn't that be the reverence of tokens, the very thing God warned Moses about? Just as you shouldn't worship idols, you shouldn't worship relics, statues, or depictions. Those things may have their place in storytelling and teaching the young, but shouldn't take on lives of their own. That was the finding of the Pope himself in 1390, and in this case he was correct.
