

Gas Station Drugs

If you want more proof they want you dead, here it is. Entire city blocks in New York City and other towns have now been given over to “legal” drug pushing, as licensed street vendors offer you whatever you want, while police walk by and do nothing. Want dangerous prescription drugs without a prescription for low prices? No problem. They've got it. We are told they smuggle it in from the Dominican Republic and other places, but that is just a guess. My guess is they don't have to smuggle it at all, since it is probably supplied by the government and Big Pharma. Why do I say that? Because these ten city blocks in New York they are talking about there are in Washington Heights. My guess is the poorer parts of Washington Heights, overlapping Harlem to the south, so this is targeted to the poor and those of color. Great way to stall a revolution, right: keep everyone zonked.

This is wildly illegal, so the Feds should be there overnight even if Mamdani has been paid off. What do we have an FDA and DEA for if not for stuff like this? DEA is very active in New York City, of course, so where are they? It's a nationwide stand down, of course. This is part of their full-spectrum war against you, and it didn't just start recently, though it is accelerating. This has been going on in all cities and towns for decades: I have seen it for myself. City, state, and federal government bodies not only stand down but facilitate drug pushing, because they want you dead or incapacitated. The fentanyl “crisis” was not an accident, it was government policy. Those the fake vaccines don't take, fentanyl, meth, ketamine, crack, and a thousand other street drugs will. Population control and a stop to revolution at the same time.

Still don't believe me? What about gas station drugs? You don't need to buy from pushers or vendors on the street, you can buy all the illegal drugs you want at the gas station with a credit card with your twenty gallons of unleaded. Want to be standing on the street corner with no teeth by next year, holding a bag of your own feces? Stock up at the minimart, where you can get your heroin derivatives, your fentanyl clones, and no doubt your Adderall, Viagra, and used Ozempic needles to go with your vape and your gummies. And if that still doesn't appeal to you, since you are too rich to consider such a thing, just ask your doctor. He or she is now an unlimited pusher for Big Pharma and will give you whatever you want, the more dangerous the better. You think cigarettes were addictive? You ain't seen nothin'. Your doctor will supply you with drugs you can't stop except by dying. Many of you already know this, so I am not exactly giving anyone the shock treatment, but I hope there may be some young people not yet addicted I can save. All of us should never stop warning young people about this, and many other things.

In researching this, I saw the FDA claiming it had issued warnings about gas station drugs, but I haven't seen any of those warnings, have you? But we aren't paying the FDA and DEA to issue warnings anyway, we are paying them to shut down stuff like this, which would be very easy to do since gas stations and minimarts are not part of some underground drug trade. They are already heavily regulated. You simply issue a notice to all businesses that if they are caught selling illegal products, they will be heavily fined and then shut down. They already know this, since everyone knows the law here. Nobody think it is legal to sell illegal drugs. I will be told there are loopholes these suppliers crawl through, but that is bunkum. If there are loopholes is because FDA and DEA created them. So close them and execute the laws. Instruct police and sheriff's departments to check the isles while they are picking up their Little Debbies. It isn't rocket science.

But, as we know, the FDA and DEA are too busy running interference for Pfizer to actually execute or prosecute any laws. They are too busy targeting Dr. Mercola for selling organic collagen or something, and can't be bothered to outlaw ZaZa Red.* Your local police are too busy harassing street preachers or fining people for singing cover songs or for selling raw milk or arresting people for not wearing a mask or threatening people for giving away kittens to actually execute any real laws.

*Nine states led by Tennessee and Alabama outlawed ZaZa and similar brands three years ago, but breaking the law is only a misdemeanor, which makes no sense since these drugs destroy lives. But that begs the question: why would those States have to pass that law? Where were the feds? Where were FDA and DEA and Justice? Where was Congress? You are paying these people to protect you and your children and they are doing the opposite. If they didn't want tens millions of people addicted, they wouldn't be.
