

The Fake Fort Hood Shooter

by Miles Mathis

October 19, 2026

Just my opinion, as usual, based on the free internet research I do below

This is by request, and I am going to do it in record time. To remind you, the Fort Hood shooting allegedly happened in 2009. Nidal Hasan murdered 13 people and injured 32 others. Note the usual numerology there. It was staged on November 5, Guy Fawkes Day, which is also a spook marker: Guy Fawkes was an early Intelligence asset and his event was staged as well, so we see Intel nodding to itself here, as usual.

Hasan is in the news again, since they are talking about televising his execution by firing squad. They have already walked that back, since I guess they didn't want to do another CGI production like the Charlie Kirk fake, since everyone saw through that. You should know the whole Fort Hood vaudeville is fake just from that, but I have more for you.

At first I thought I would hit it through his relationship with obvious CIA asset Anwar Al-Awlaki, but then I found an even quicker way to blow his cover. Here it is:

That's a screenshot from his page at FastPeopleSearch, as you see. That is free public information, and you can go there yourself if you want, so I am not doxxing anyone. Outing an agent, yes, doxxing someone, no. But isn't outing an agent against the law? Nope. It is against the law for another agent or government employee to out an agent, but it is not against the law for a private citizen to out an agent running a psyop, since the psyop is against the law. It is against the law for the CIA or the military to be running psyops against the American public, so I am not the one breaking laws here. I am just calling a fiction a fiction. Call it self-defense.

This is definitely the right Nidal Hasan, since the age is right and as you see he was in Killeen in 2009. That is Fort Hood. I looked up that address at Google Maps, and it is just off base in Killeen. Probably chosen because it is 1801, aces and eights. Also notice he arrived in Killeen just in time for the event, transferring in July for the event in November. So that was convenient.

His current address should be the federal prison in Leavenworth, KS, but the computer doesn't know he is there. According to the computer he is in a million-dollar home in Bethesda. Truthfinder tells us the same thing, having no Kansas address for him.

So I thought I would look him up at Leavenworth. Nope, can't do it. No results come up for USDB Leavenworth, and the link at Wikipedia is over a decade old, with even the Wayback Machine telling us the website had been dormant since 2015. So the Army seems to be hiding from researchers like me, you know why. And this time they hid the entire website to do it.

He was previously in Bethesda from 1997-2003 at the Uniformed Services University, but as you see that doesn't match the addresses above, where he has been in Bethesda AFTER Fort Hood. You will say that Bethesda address is his parents' house. Not according to that page at FastPeopleSearch, since I researched that very possibility. They list 40 relatives for him, and none of the ones of an age to be his parents live in Bethesda. Hanan, Husein and Malik live in Silver Spring and Vinton. Other relatives live in Falls Church, Reston, Fairfax, and McLean, indicating a possible CIA family.

I also note he was in Roanoke until late 2006, which also doesn't match his bio at Wikipedia. We are told there he was doing an internship and residency after 2004 at Walter Reed, which is in DC. He went to high school and college in Roanoke but was out of there by 1995.

And finally we have those two addresses in Silver Spring, though that location doesn't appear on his bio. That could be his time in CIA or similar.

Hasan's middle name is Malik, which may also be a clue. His brother Anas has the same middle name, so it may be their mother's name. Malik is an old Phoenician name meaning King, possibly indicating these Hasans are from lines of princes. This fits the current story perfectly, since you would expect this guy to be some sort of worldwide peer, related to all the other actors we have outed.

This is already in the can, but I will continue just for fun, and because it is so easy. Wikipedia has all the dirty laundry out in the breeze as usual.

According to The Washington Post, Hasan made a presentation titled "The Quranic World View as It Relates to Muslims in the U.S. Military" [\[33\]](#) during his senior year of residency at WRAMC; it was not well received by some attendees. He suggested the U.S. Department of Defense "should allow Muslims [\[sic\]](#) Soldiers the option of being released as 'Conscientious objectors' to increase troop morale and decrease adverse events."[\[34\]](#)[\[35\]](#) On a previous slide, he explained "adverse events" could be refusal to deploy, espionage, or killing of fellow soldiers.

Despite these problems, Hasan was promoted from captain to major on May 17, 2009,[\[27\]](#)[\[39\]](#)

You have to laugh. So he gives a slide presentation on how Muslim soldiers might snap and kill their comrades, and so they promote him to major at age 39, right out of school? And did you catch that age? He joined the army in 1988, and they allegedly put him through school for 20 years? Is that how it works? After his residency at Walter Reed he went back and got a Masters in Public Health? Really?

Prior to his transfer [to Fort Hood], Hasan had received a "poor performance" evaluation from supervisors and medical faculty.[\[41\]](#) Despite concerns, his former boss, Lt. Col. Ben Phillips, graded his performance as "outstanding."[\[42\]](#)

Hmmmm. So he was a terrible doctor but a great agent, I guess.

Hasan's cousin, Virginia attorney Nader Hasan, disputed the assertion that he was "disenchanted with the military," but said Hasan dreaded war after counseling soldiers with post-traumatic stress disorder.

So I looked up this Nader Hasan of Fairfax. He is a year older, so age 57 now, but his work experience at LinkedIn starts in 2019, giving us a 20 year gap in his bio. He got his law degree in 1999.

Hasan's aunt also said Hasan sought discharge because of harassment relating to his Islamic faith.[31] An Army spokesman did not confirm the relatives' statements, [44] with the deputy director of the American Muslim Armed Forces and Veterans Affairs Council stating the reported harassment was "inconsistent" with their records.[45]

No name for this aunt, but interesting the Muslim ombudsman of the Army is saying she is a liar. Seems like these various actors could keep their stories straight. As it is, everyone looks bad here and no one looks good. Since this was a big fake, they should have been able to come up with a script where everyone except Nidal looked good.

Hasan's uncle Rafiq Hamad, a resident of Ramallah in the West Bank, characterized Hasan as gentle and quiet. He fainted while observing childbirth, hence his choice to focus on psychiatry. He was deeply sensitive and mourned a pet bird for months after it died.[1]

Right. So let's look this Rafiq up. You will say he is in Ramallah, so that will be hard to do. Nope, since the big computer knows who he is.

He is hiding behind the name Ismail Ismail in a $2.5 million, 4,500sqft home in Virginia, according to this free and public people search. And yes, this is the right guy, since he is related to many Hasans, including the ones above like Nader.

The government agents monitoring Islamic websites believe Hasan, using the screenname 'NidalHasan', posted about suicide bombings in May 2009, although, during this period, government agents did not link the posts to Hasan.[\[53\]](#)[\[67\]](#)

Um, what? So Maj. Nidal Hasan was hiding from the army behind the mysterious moniker NidalHasan? And they couldn't unwind that clever ruse?

ABC News reported after the fact, anonymous government agents issued a press-release claiming they were allegedly aware Hasan attempted to contact Al Qaeda, [\[68\]](#) then issued a press-release claiming Hasan had "more unexplained connections to people tracked by the FBI" than just Anwar al-Awlaki.[\[57\]](#)

So they knew their own major was in contact with the dreaded Al Qaeda, but ignored it and let him arm himself off base? Does that make any sense?

Hasan was to be deployed to Afghanistan[\[75\]](#) on November 28, 2009.

His aunt said he did not tell the family he was going to Afghanistan.[\[50\]](#)

Whoops! The continuity editor failed again. So Hasan didn't tell his own family he was deploying to Afghanistan? Maybe because . . . he wasn't?

Hasan allegedly opened fire in a Soldier Readiness Center. I hope you get the joke there. I guess these soldiers weren't ready, since this solitary wimp doctor who couldn't watch a baby being born and cried when his turtle got sick, killed or wounded 45 of them without getting killed himself. Amazing, isn't it? 45 armed soldiers on a base can't take down one lumpy doctor with a single pistol? This was an FN 5-7, so he would have to reload at least twice, even if he hit someone with every shot. Wikipedia skips over this little problem, as you might expect. He had a second pistol but didn't fire it, so he wasn't like Kevin Costner in Silverado, firing from both hands in opposite directions.

Hasan was hospitalized in the intensive care unit at Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, Texas.[\[91\]](#)[\[92\]](#) His condition was described as "stable."[\[93\]](#) News reports on November 7, 2009, indicated he was in a coma.[\[94\]](#) On November 9, hospital spokesperson Dewey Mitchell announced Hasan regained consciousness and was able to talk since he was removed from a ventilator on November 7.[\[95\]](#)

Ah, a stable coma, I guess. He fell into a coma on Nov. 7, so they removed him from the ventilator on Nov. 7. Who is writing this, Mickey Mouse?

At the time, authorities did not specify if they would seek the death penalty;[\[101\]](#) Colonel Michael Mulligan would serve as the Army's lead prosecutor. Mulligan was lead prosecutor on the Hasan Akbar case, in which a soldier was sentenced to death for the murder of two members of the U.S. military.^[102]

So two guys both named Hasan? What are the odds? We will look at Akbar in a moment.

Hasan was moved from Brooke Army Medical Center to the Bell County Jail in Belton, Texas, on April 9, 2010.^[107] Fort Hood negotiated a renewable $207,000 contract with Bell County in March to house Hasan for six months.^{[108][109]}

Note the footnote number there: aces and eights, of course. But this is as stupid as the rest: why would the army put this mass murderer in the Bell County Jail for six months, or ever? He should have been put in a military jail, not this little civilian county jail in Belton. So that's another joke. Reminds us of Ted Bundy escaping from the Pitkin County Jail in Aspen. Twice.

Hasan remained incarcerated and in a wheelchair. He continued to receive paychecks.^[127]

That was 2012, three years after the event in 2009, so Hasan was still being paid by the army. Makes sense, right? That is from Wiki and it is footnoted:

127. Lt. General says Hasan still has rank, getting paycheck – KXXV-TV News Channel 25 – Central Texas News and Weather for Waco, Temple, Killeen |". Kxxv.com. Archived from the original on March 28, 2012. Retrieved March 16, 2012.

So I am not making it up. During Covid, soldiers were busted out of the military in a matter of months for not getting vaxxed, losing their rank, pay, and benefits, but this guy who allegedly murdered 13 still had his rank, pay, and benefits three years later. You have to laugh. According to the mainstream story, he was not dismissed from the army until 2013, after allegedly being convicted of all crimes. And I would assume not even then. He is still a military actor in his fake wheelchair, no doubt still being paid with your taxes to roll himself around.

You may remember that Hasan had a long beard while acting as his own lawyer. Neither Bell County jail nor any other jail, civilian or military, should have allowed that, since it is against all protocol with violent murderers, but it was great for news coverage, since it made him look extra-crazy. They did the same thing with Manson and many others, as we have seen.

Hasan represented himself in court and the judge allowed it, which is a joke since his previously assigned attorneys had been planning to plead insanity. So the judge allowed a potentially insane person to represent himself. Hasan brought no witnesses and only very briefly cross examined a couple of the prosecution's 90 witnesses.

Hasan also formally declined to argue prosecutors failed to prove their case.^[141]^[142] Hasan did not call any witnesses or testify in his defense; he rested his defense on August 21, 2013.^[143] On August 22, 2013, Hasan declined to give a closing argument.^[144]

Impossible. No real judge would allow such a thing. It reminds us of Manson's ridiculous trial, where no defense was presented. Or Ted Kaczynski's, ditto.

By August 13, prosecutors shifted to presenting forensic evidence with FBI agents present at the crime scene testifying they had so much evidence at the crime scene, they ran out of markers. This evidence included one hundred forty-six cartridge cases and six magazines.

Two problems there. Can you tell me what they are? Why would FBI be at the crime scene? This was on a military base, so FBI had no jurisdiction. The military is capable of investigating its own crimes, especially one like this that was open and shut. And we are being told Hasan had 146 cartridge cases and six magazines for one FN 5-7? So he fired 146 times before being brought down? That would be eight clips, plus six more unfired. So apparently he reloaded seven times while these soldiers stood there and got shot? Is that what we are supposed to believe? They shouldn't have arrested him, they should have sent him to Ukraine where he could have taken on the entire Russian Army with one pistol.

And for one final joke:

On August 28, 2014, Hasan's attorney said Hasan wrote to Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, then head of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL). In the letter, Hasan requested to be made a citizen of the Islamic State, and included his signature and the abbreviation SoA (Soldier of Allah).[\[158\]](#)[\[159\]](#)

ISIL, like ISIS, is just a CIA front, so this is more theater. But Baghdadi (real name allegedly Ibrahim al-Badri) needed the promotion, since he had just founded the Islamic State a month earlier, from his cubicle in Langley.

He later changed his name to Abu Bakr. Can you decode that very clever name? Try Abe Baker, or even better Abe Banker.

So was the other guy on death row in Leavenworth, Hasan Akbar, also a fake? Of course. He is the guy that supposedly went berserk on a base in Kuwait in 2003, killing two. His real name is Mark Kools, and they give no picture for him on his page at Wiki.

That's because he's black, not Arab, as you see. And we already know it is a fake just from that one picture. How? Because he should have been busted out immediately for cause, and therefore should not have been allowed to wear his dress uniform to court. But that didn't fit the script, I guess. And look at that guy behind him smirking at the absurdity of all this.

If you aren't following me, notice he still has his full rank insignias on his uniform. You will say they had to convict him before he could be thrown out of the army or even lose rank, but that isn't even close to being true. You don't have to be convicted of murder to lose rank in the army, and it can happen almost overnight. So the idea he could murder two fellow soldiers and then still be walking around in his dress uniform with full rank years later is ridiculous. Army courts aren't like civilian courts, with giant backlogs of frivolous lawsuits, and they work fast. Or they do when they are real. They certainly don't take years to demote someone or kick him out of the army for murder.

Beyond that, you would expect someone who murdered his fellow soldiers to be fired immediately by his superior officer, and relieved of all rank and uniforms, even before any court martial or other proceedings. The court martial would then be a confirmation of that immediate decision. That is the way it would work in the civilian world, and you would expect the army to be far more strict. If you were working for Target and murdered all your co-workers, being caught on camera doing it, they wouldn't wait until you were convicted years later to fire you and stop your paychecks, would they?

No, they would immediately fire you, stop all payments, and clear out your locker, taking any uniforms, keys, and other paraphernalia.

Although Kools was caught red-handed and confessed, it took two years to convict him, we aren't told why. I am telling you it was to keep it in the news for as long as possible. With Nidal Hasan six years later, they drew it out even longer.

As you see, Kools was Airborne, another red flag since they work with Intelligence. They are an elite corps. One of the guys he allegedly shot in the back was an intelligence officer. Kools was E-5, so halfway up the rank ladder for enlisted. Pretty good for age 31 in Airborne. He has degrees in both Aeronautical and Mechanical Engineering, which is almost unheard of for an enlisted soldier. People with degrees like that are normally O-grade officers. He was also ROTC but supposedly did not receive a commission, and they tell you it was because he didn't get his degrees fast enough, as if he was way behind schedule. E-5 at age 31 is not way behind schedule. It is ahead of schedule.

"I suppose they want to punk me or just humiliate me. Perhaps they feel that I will not do anything about that. They are right about that. I am not going to do anything about it as long as I stay here. But as soon as I am in Iraq, I am going to try and kill as many of them as possible."[\[12\]](#)

That's allegedly from his diary. Nobody writes that in an army diary. It would be beyond stupid and we have already established this guy was not stupid.

His military defense attorneys said that Akbar was diagnosed with psychiatric problems at the age of 14. He had suffered worsening symptoms in the military, which included "paranoia, irrational behavior, insomnia and other sleep disorders," making it impossible for him to do his job.[\[5\]](#)

Except that he was promoted four times to E-5 by the age of 31, contradicting that. They don't recruit Muslim headcases and then quickly promote them, do they?

Kools has been under death sentence since 2016, when the Supreme Court declined to hear. So why has no President given the execution order? And why did it take 13 years in court for an open and shut Army case where the guy was caught in the act and confessed? It makes no sense. Since he pled guilty it should have been a summary judgment with no points of appeal. In the old days he would have been executed immediately or within a few months. In most countries in the world he would be executed immediately. The answer isn't that the army has gone soft, it is that the army has been taken over by Intelligence, allowing it to run these fakes.

Still don't believe me?

According to FastPeopleSearch, Mark Kools, 55, related to all the right people including his mother Quran Bilal, lives in TN and is NOT aka Hasan Akbar. So according to the big computer that knows everything about us, he never legally changed his name and could not have been known by an alias in the Army. In 2005 he was in San Antonio, and has no address in Leavenworth. Also no APO address in the Middle East. Also notice he is related to a lot of peerage names like Owens, Hardwick, Ross (Jewish), King, Bell, Lowe, Moody, Dodd, and Vance. His mother may be nee Bell.

Also a red flag is his location in 1999, Fort Gordon.

Named in honor of Medal of Honor recipient Gary Gordon, it is the home of the United States Army Signal Corps, United States Army Cyber Command, and the Cyber Center of Excellence as well as the National Security Agency/Central Security Service' Georgia Cryptologic Center (NSA Georgia or NSAG).^[1]

So this is not a normal Army base for half-crazy enlisted sergeants. It specializes in Cyber and Signal Corps, and is tied closely to the NSA. Telling us who probably pulled this event.
