There is no Nvidia Spy Scandal

We will start with the word invidia, which means envy in Latin. "To look in a hostile manner." Why would anyone name a computer company that? Nobody knows anything because no one asks the right questions.

I find it amusing that I predicted Nvidia would hit the wall very soon, and about a week later . . . it did. Little ole me, who knows nothing about economics, hates economics, and argues that there is no such thing as economics, since the world runs on institutional theft, not economics. How did I know? Because I know the valuation of Nvidia is just the latest con, the latest mist, invented to prop up a stock market that is mostly mist. They need these fake trillion-dollar companies to hide the fact the entire economy has already collapsed. Same reason they need these fake trillionaires and billionaires like Musk and Zuckerberg.

And how did I know Nvidia was mist? Logic. As with SpaceX, Apple, and many other companies, the numbers didn't add up. I have hit it before, many times. The valuations reported simply cannot be true, given the products and timelines, so I knew they were false. It is that simple.

But the big boys saw it coming and invented this cover story. Nvidia would lose half a trillion overnight in November, but it wouldn't be a correction, it would be due to its founder sleeping with some lady. Wait, that wouldn't explain it! Why would the market care who he is sleeping with? Oh, I know, she is a Chinese spy. CHI-NAH. China might steal their tech and then the company would be worthless. Yeah, that's the ticket.

Again, that makes no sense, so I knew it wasn't true without even researching it. The market just wouldn't care, not if Huang was sleeping with Xi Jinping's wife. It just doesn't matter who is sleeping with whom. These companies don't run on bedroom services, they allegedly run on selling products, and no one is going to stop buying a computer product based on who is sleeping with whom. I don't give a damn who Huang is sleeping with and nobody else does either. But the people who write the scripts had to come up with something, and they think we will believe anything, because we always have.

I also knew from the name of the lady, Alice Huang. No relation, they say, but they always lie, so I assume this is some cousin they tapped to play this part.

I also knew from reading the bio of Jensen Huang, who famously got his start at Denny's. He and some friends came up for the idea of a chip company while at Denny's, writing it up on a paper napkin. The usual horse hockey we get from these scriptmonkeys at Langley. The world had no opening for a new chip company in those years, since the big governments of the world had been producing chips for decades and already had a monopoly. Why would they allow some nobody to come in and take a huge share of profits? We are told Huang specialized in chips for AI, but there is no such thing as chips just for AI. A chip is a chip and AI doesn't use AI chips. But even if it did, the huge existing chip makers could make those just as easily as Huang. So the rise of Nvidia makes no sense on the face of it. Huang is obviously just another actor from the families, like Jobs, Gates, Ellison, Zuckerberg, Musk, and all the rest. He is a created figurehead, invented to make you think these companies are private and independent, rather than a part of the Kraken. And invented to attach these fake numbers to, to prop up the stock market. Everything was already crashing so fast fifteen years ago they couldn't keep up. They had already overvalued the biggest companies by huge margins and couldn't really justify doubling the values of Apple and the rest one more time, so they needed to invent some new fake companies to inflate: enter Nvidia.

Then there's the fact that insiders, including Trump and Ro Khanna [Khanna=Kohen, of course], knew this was coming and sold Nvidia stock a month ago. How could they know that unless I am right and this was all planned and scripted?

And of course Mike Adams at NaturalNews is reading this upside down, as usual.

@HealthRanger

You are watching a DEEP STATE COUP against Nvidia! New AI infographic spells it out. It's a huge grab of Nvidia's tech portfolio, influence and dominant market position of tech for surveillance and autonomous machines, among other things:

As if the Deep State wasn't behind Nvidia all along. Why would the Deep State need a coup or need to steal back what it logically should have already owned all along? As I asked above, why would the Deep State allow Huang and his boys to take trillions of dollars in profit in chips they invented back in the day (see Shockley, etc.)? The government already owned patents on all this stuff before Huang was even born. Same question I asked about Saudi Arabia: why would the Anglo-Americans allow this family of goat herders from the desert to vacuum up trillions of dollars of profit when we could take over the entire region overnight, and already HAD taken it over a century ago? Just as the Sauds are fronts, Huang and all the other tech billionaires are fronts.

Anthropic is next.
